SUMMARY.

The correspondent of the Australian Press Association learns that the enemy's progress for the time being has been checked.

The immediate danger, it is pointed out, is over.

Until, however, it is known where Prince Rupprecht's reserves are to be thrown in anxiety will continue.

There was rather great artillery activity on the front south of the Aisne on Saturday.

The French have improved their positions north-east of Ambleny.

They continued their pressure south of the Ourcq, and made new progress.

The French have also successfully continued local operations between the Ourcq and the Marne.

French and American troops extended their lines from north of Cauly to Chezy.

They have advanced their line south of Veuilly about a mile.

They captured Neuilly-la-Poterie and Bourresches, appreciably improving their positions on the front from Torcy to Bouresches.

The enemy attacked the French on the Bouresches-Le Thiolet front, but the attacks were shattered with heavy losses.

Between the Marne and Reims the action against Bligny continued, resulting in the capture of the village from the enemy.

War experts are insisting upon the far-reaching significance of the appearance of American forces in the battle of the Marne.

Enemy raids constitute the sole activity on the British front.

All have been failures, Mr. Percival Phillips telegraphs, the Australians being the heroes of the fighting.

Sir Douglas Haig on Friday evening reported that the French improved their line in the neighbourhood of the Locre.

They made a successful local attack, and took prisoners.

The British brought down 14 enemy aeroplanes and drove down eight.

Reporting on Saturday, Sir Douglas Haig stated that the British took prisoners in a raid in the neighbourhood of Hulluch.

Hostile artillery has been active northward of Albert and south-east of Arras.

The Germans claim to have taken 83 French prisoners during an advance west of Kemmel.

The enemy also claims to have captured trenches astride the Ardre, south-east of Sarcy.

Five British aeroplanes fought seven German aeroplanes over the North Sea.

The Germans retired after losing one machine, which fell into the sea in flames.

The efficiency of the Italian army has enormously increased during the winter and spring.

The Italians entered enemy trenches fronting Monte di Valbella, and took 80 prisoners.

An impression prevails in Vienna that Austria is likely to undergo Russia's experiences.

A rebellious spirit is growing everywhere, owing to political and economic reasons.

The utmost uncertainty and disorder continue to prevail in Russia.

Nothing is known regarding the food and economic situation in Petrograd.

The meetings of the Imperial War Cabinet and the Imperial Conference will probably begin in the next few days.

The majority of the representatives have already arrived.

Pacificists in England are preparing a memorial urging Lord Lansdowne to repeat his effort to secure peace.

The memorial declares that a large section of the people believe the time is opportune for an honourable settlement.

England and America in April and May constructed more shipping than the Germans destroyed.

During April and May double the number of submarines were destroyed than the Germans constructed.

Mr. Cameron, the Nationalist candidate, was elected for the Upper Hunter by a somewhat narrow majority.

Mr. Holman says the change in the majority is due to the fact that the Labour candidate polled a heavier vote.

Mr. J. Storey expressed his disappointment last night at the result of the election.

The Labour Council's anti-recruiting resolutions had, he thought, a material effect on Captain Toombs's chances.

The Federal Cabinet has decided to fix the price of meat.

The fixed price is to be based upon the export parity, and is to relate to cash retail sales.

Lieutenant-Colonel P. P. Abbott, M.P., C.M.G., returned to Sydney on Saturday after over three years' absence at the front.

"Anybody who talked about peace by negotiation in Britain to-day would be pole-axed," he remarked.

"The motto of the United Kingdom is 'Stick it,' and I would pass on this motto to Australia," he added.

Leichhardt's farewell to Captain Carmichael, M.C., in the local park on Saturday was enthusiastic, despite the rain.

"Peace is a long way off. You will be called upon to bear heavier burdens than in the past," he said.

Captain Carmichael remarked that he could not support the action of the A.L.P. in regard to the war.

Mr. F. Flowers, M.L.C., made a vigorous speech, in which he denounced those who decried Australia's part in the war.

Peace proposals, he said, did not represent the spirit of the people.

The Governor and Lady Davidson paid their first official visit to Wahroonga on Saturday.

His Excellency laid the foundation-stone of a soldiers' memorial hall in connection with St. Paul's Church.

The secret debate at the A.L.P. Conference on the Labour party's war aims has closed.

The debate will be continued at the Perth Conference, which opens next Monday.

The board of the Printing Trades' Union has decided in favour of withdrawing its affiliation from the Labour Council.

A ballot will be taken on the question whether the decision of the board should be endorsed.

A further contingent of invalid soldiers returned on Saturday morning in three special trains from Melbourne.

There were 440 New South Wales men and 39 Queenslanders, all of whom had been under shell-fire in France.

The Randwick branch of the National Association has affirmed that no Germans should be employed in the Public Service.

A step forward in finding employment for returned soldiers is to be taken by the Repatriation Department.

Disabled men receiving vocational training in the technical schools are, when proficient, to be found work in factories.

A cottage erected by voluntary workers at Carlton was handed over to Sergeant W. P. Hayes on Saturday.

Another cottage, built by the employees of David Jones, Ltd., at Hurstville, was handed over to Driver R. W. Richards.

The Repatriation Department is taking action to regulate collections at patriotic carnivals.

Rules are to be drawn up, fixing the conditions under which professional showmen can make charges for their services.

In connection with the Salvation Army Congress, 500 juveniles provided a spectacular entertainment in the Town Hall.

The Syrian community have expressed through M. Chayet their gratitude to France for her protection.

A restricted turnover in investments was effected in a quiet market on the Stock Exchange on Saturday, prices being steady.

In the mining market tin shares commanded most attention, and Ratrut received good support.

The advance in the price of choicest quality butter has not been sufficient to restrict sales, and the demand continues strong.

Forecast.—Excepting for showers on the central and northern coast, with fresh and mostly southerly winds, fine in the eastern districts and cold, frosty, foggy night; cloudy, warmer, and unsettled in the south-western districts, later extending eastwards, with scattered rain and thunder.

QUALITY AND VALUE.

When REPLENISHING their WARDROBES for WINTER, Ladies are WELL ADVISED when making their PURCHASES to SEE that they GET QUALITY COMMENSURATE with VALUE. Most ladies are KEEN BUYERS—they have LEARNED that ALTHOUGH a PRICE SEEMS LOW, FAIR VALUE is NOT REPRESENTED if the article be of INFERIOR quality. What they STRIVE FOR—and ALWAYS OBTAIN at the NEW PALACE EMPORIUM—is GOOD QUALITY GOODS at LOW QUALITY PRICES.
We enumerate in this announcement SEASONABLE BLOUSES, DRESSING GOWNS, WRAPPERS, and COSTUMES. These REPRESENT the ACME of VALUE—QUALITY CONSIDERED—and SHOULD APPEAL to ladies who MAKE A POINT of SEEING that their MONEY GOES the FARTHEST in the purchase of FASHIONABLE ATTIRE. If possible, an INSPECTION should be made of the UNIQUE DISPLAY of WINTER WEARABLES in the FASHION SHOWROOMS, where no one is importuned to purchase. If unable to call, a copy of our PORTFOLIO of WINTER FASHIONS will be POSTED FREE on request. A perusal of this publication will PROVE INTERESTING, adding, as it does, to the RENOWN of those GREAT ECONOMISERS,

ANTHONY HORDERNS'

VIOLETS CRYSTALLISED

APPEAR ON SPECIAL TABLES, GROUND FLOOR, AND SUGGEST THE RIGHT DECORATION ON CAKES AND CHOCOLATES FOR "VIOLET" DAY.

Violets Crystallised!—yes, actually crystallised, in such a way that their perfume and flavour are retained. They are the result of expert and patient effort on the part of those responsible for the innumerable irresistible Sweetmeats that attract you always to Farmer's Confectionery Department. But—

CRYSTALLISED VIOLETS ARE NOT ALONE

A SWEETMEAT—THEY ARE DECORATIVE. There are two varieties of Crystallised Violets—"La France" and "The Prince of Wales"—and both kinds may be had. Priced at .. 9d per oz. or priced at ...... 10/ per lb. Bought by the ounce they are enclosed in dainty transparent tissue bags, but it is a saving to purchase them at 10/ per lb.

If you are working for a "Violet" Day Stall—these crystallised Violets suggest decorations on the Cakes and Chocolates and other "Goodies" you are preparing.

THE "H.C. OF L." AGAIN.

As Wigg said to Wagg:— This High Cost of Living ought never to worry a Surgeon, because he generally CUTS OUT SOMETHING.

And though many a housewife thinks the limit has been reached, butter may be cut out by using for sandwiches. For "Rex" Luncheon Cheese spreads easily, and is piquantly flavoured. It is a perfectly matured full cream cheese, which contains valuable digestive properties found only in carefully "aged" Cheese.

"REX" LUNCHEON CHEESE

Try a tin to-day. Accept no substitute, because there is none to equal "Rex" Cheese. A few tins posted to the boys at the front will provide them with a welcome change from army rations. "Rex" Cheese always opens in good condition and keeps well until eaten up.

BALL AND WELCH, LTD.,

THE HOUSE FOR RELIABLE GOODS AT MODERATE PRICES.

FIVE SPECIAL VALUES IN LADIES' WINTER COATS.

To-day we announce five outstanding values in WARM WINTER COATS of stylish and distinctive design.

Fine values reminiscent of those early days before the far-reaching effects of the Great War had made itself felt on the World's Commerce.

With submarine activity and increasing scarcity of importations, these low prices are all the more remarkable, but it serves as an additional proof of the wise forethought and keen judgment which characterise Ball and Welch buying, and which enable their clients to share in the benefits.

As an instance, where could the equal of this SMART COAT be obtained at this price, 35/.

PRICE 35/.—COSY COAT OF BROWN TWEED, cut in full swing style, with roomy Raglan sleeves and turned-back cuffs. This Coat may be worn with revers open or closed to throat. Deep roll collar, two vertical pockets.

FACTS—NOT FICTION!

A TREMENDOUS PRODUCTION. EVERY MOMENT OF IT REAL—UNDENIABLY AUTHENTIC.

Walk down Unter Den Linden. That is the building wherein the destruction of the Lusitania was plotted. Let us go in with Gerard. The Kaiser, Tirpitz, and Von Jagow are there, their brains connecting the spheres against humanity. For three years Gerard was England's only friend in Berlin—and he defied the Kaiser and his satellites at such historic occasions as these.

TO SEE "GERARD'S FOUR YEARS IN GERMANY" IS TO MEET THE KAISER, CROWN PRINCE, VON TIRPITZ, AND HINDENBURG FACE TO FACE, and to see what ruthless savages are the men who plunged the world into war.

CHAPTER XII.
GOOD MEN AND TRUE.

Copplestone saw little of his bed that night. At 7 o'clock in the evening came a telegram from Sir Cresswell Oliver, saying

Wonderful Value in IRON BEDSTEADS

20% (4/- in £) Off Regular Prices.

This is a Unique Opportunity to Obtain Well-made Bedsteads at Very Attractive Prices.

See Our Large Display.

In order to make more space for our Oak and Maple Furniture, and to improve shopping facilities for visitors to our Showrooms, we have decided to reduce our very extensive stock of Iron Bedsteads.

This opportunity will be well worth your attention, as we are allowing a special discount of 20 per cent. (4/ in the £) off all Iron Bedsteads.

At the present time, when the cost of production and material has advanced considerably—when shipping is scarce, and freight rates high, a sale of this character is extremely unusual—ONE YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO OVERLOOK.

The majority of these beds were purchased long before the big increases in cost—for this reason we are in a position to offer them at the prices shown.

IF YOU DESIRE A COMPLETE BED add £5 10s. to the price marked on any design. This will include a strong, 3-ply, roll-side wire mattress, —Kapok mattress, bolster, and 2 pillows in linen ticking.

Open till 9.30 p.m. Fridays.

LAST DAY, SATURDAY, JUNE 15.

CHECK THAT COLD

If the vagaries of the weather have found your weak spots, let THERMOGENE help you to a speedy recovery.

A chill or a cold is not a matter for disregard. Either may be the forerunner of serious complications to follow. It is wisest and easiest to check them at once. For any and all chill-caused aches and pains Thermogene brings grateful relief. It is swift and sure, no matter how acute or long-standing the suffering may be. You use Thermogene just as it comes from the box—and it begins its good work the moment you apply it.

It relieves pains caused by

LUMBAGO	BRONCHITIS
RHEUMATISM	CHEST COLDS
NEURITIS	SORE THROATS
NEURALGIA	SPRAINS

MUSCULAR PAINS

Pleurisy and Pneumonia, too, are ailments for which Thermogene is an excellent alleviative; but in these cases Medical Aid should always be sought early.

THERMOGENE ABSORBENT WADDING

Thermogene has won the gratitude of thousands of sufferers and its merits have gained for it the recognition of the BRITISH RED CROSS SOCIETY, the ROYAL NAVY, the MILITARY AUTHORITIES, and MANY HOSPITALS.

Suitable for everyone—powerful enough for adult, gentle enough for child, and quite harmless. Write for the illustrated book on the Thermogene treatment, which tells how to get the best results. Send a postcard to-day to Thermogene Bureau, 233 Clarence-street, Sydney, N.S.W.

Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery
For Coughs and Colds.

Best for Children and Grown Folk, too.

Many children who thrive in summer are retarded in their healthy development by a succession of coughs and colds through the winter months. Some mothers think it cannot be avoided, and let the colds run their course, stealing the roses from the children's cheeks, and enfeebling the little limbs. The little bodies are racked with coughs, the throat strained, and the lungs receive injuries that sometimes last through life. Only a cold, but the little one recovers slowly its liveliness and bloom. Catches cold more easily after each attack. The child's cold requires intelligent treatment, and the careful mother cuts short its course by timely use of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery. A few doses relieve the congestion and cool the feverish head, the little throat becomes comfortable, the coughing stops. Soon the child is itself again, and the system has no strain from which to recover.

Mothers are the Ones Who Know What is Best For the Children.

"Mooiree, Cremorne-road, Cremorne.
"Dear Sirs,—
"My children, Gordon and Eileen, are very fond of your Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery, and I cure their winter colds every year with it. The other day I said to Eileen, 'Your cold is not well yet, Eileen.' She answered, 'I hope it won't get well, because you give me Dr. Sheldon's every night and morning, and I love it.' She was disappointed, for her cold quickly disappeared, and the children's favourite medicine (and may I say Australia's best cough and lung mixture) was hidden away from them in the cupboard.
"I thought it might interest you to hear of such lovers of your Famous New Discovery.
"I remain, yours faithfully,
"(Sgd.), F. M. HEWITT.
"Mooiree, Cremorne-road, Cremorne."

"Shirley, Penkivil-street, Willoughby.
"Dear Sirs,—
"At 3 years of age my little Phoebe suffered with an acute attack of croup. I tried the usual remedies, and evidently they did not get at the root of the ailment, because the attack left Phoebe a severe cough, which sometimes became chokingly croupy at night. A friend of mine, in whose house I was staying with Phoebe, was awakened one night by one of these frightening coughing seizures, and she brought in to me a bottle of your Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery, and we gave the almost choking child a dose of the mixture. The effect was so immediately beneficial that I have kept Dr. Sheldon's wonderful remedy by me ever since. I feel that if I had used it at the first, instead of trying other so-called curative medicines, Phoebe would not have suffered so with her cough.
"Hoping that my little note of appreciation of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery may help other mothers to rely on your good, simple, soundly-healthful remedy.
"I remain, yours faithfully,
"(Sgd.), OLIVE R. TUBB.'
"Shirley, Penkivil-street, Willoughby."

"Yooroogа, Cremorne-road, Cremorne Point.
"Dear Sirs,—
"What a favourite Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery has become in our family. My baby girl, 13 months old, Dorothy, has always been given Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery whenever she has the slightest cough or cold, so she loves the very bottle itself, and seems to know that it has been a very good friend to her.
"I have always used Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery myself, and owe my immunity from colds to its healing powers, and I recommend every mother to give her baby Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery for Colds, whether they are mild colds or very bad ones, and I am sure any mother will be thankful for my advice.
"Sincerely yours,
"(Sgd.), R. SHEPHERD.

For Coughs and Colds.

RHEUMATISM, Sciatica, & Kindred Deep-seated Pains.

RUB ZAM-BUK IN TO RUB PAIN OUT

THE stimulating properties of Zam-Buk render this pure healing balm exceedingly effective when rubbed well into the muscles and tendons or about a joint. It gives tone to the muscles of the wrist and arm, ankle and calf, and expels any pain that may be due to rheumatism, sciatica, etc., and also overcomes any tenderness and swelling, the result of a strain or sprain. Zam-Buk is regarded as indispensable as an embrocation by the leading athletes of the day.

MRS. ARCHER.

Mrs. N. Archer, of 222 Bourke-street, Darlinghurst, Sydney, writes in praise of Zam-Buk as follows:—

"For five years I was a victim of sciatica, which attacked me in the hips. My sufferings during that time were dreadful for about a year. I never left my bed. The pain was excruciating, and I could scarcely move.

"I placed myself under some of the leading doctors, but got no better under their treatment, and despaired of being cured.

"Discontinuing the medical treatment, I tried other remedies, including electrical massage, but they also proved useless.

"A friend then advised me to try salt baths as hot as I could bear them, then apply molten Zam-Buk. I tried this treatment, thoroughly massaging the Zam-Buk well into the joints and all parts where the pain was.

"For six weeks I regularly continued this treatment, until, after daily improvement, I was completely cured. I never have the slightest ache or pain now, so I have a great deal to thank Zam-Buk for. I shall always keep a pot by me, and recommend it to everybody."

Zam-Buk

To be sure of quick, clean healing, you must have Zam-Buk. It is absolutely unexcelled for ulcers, bad legs, piles, poisoned sores, ringworm, scalp disease, eczema, pimples, scaly patches, raw chapped hands, chilblains, cold sores, and other disfiguring skin troubles. Zam-Buk is also the perfect first-aid for cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, and injuries. 1/6 and 3/6, of all chemists and stores.

ON THE LAND.

TIMBER FOR BUTTER BOXES

(BY THOS. R. ROYDHOUSE.)

About a year or more ago the writer, in a previous article in these columns, dealt with the probability of the supply of material for butter-boxes running out. Personal inquiries made in those parts of New Zealand where the white pine (kahikatea) grows made it clear enough that not many years would pass ere the accessible trees would all be cut out, and the butter-box manufacturers be left without their raw material. The prime fact was (as it is now) that white pine was the only timber suitable for butter-boxes. There is nothing "just as good." When there is no more white pine something will have to be found to take its place. The urgency of the matter, so far as Australian butter producers was concerned, lay in the fact that New Zealand dairymen were beginning to murmur against the exportation of white pine to Australia, seeing that there would be none left for them in, say, ten years' time. The references at farmers' meetings in New Zealand made it clear that the Dominion Parliament would be asked to take action, and as the Prime Minister (Mr. W. F. Massey) is a farmer, and other farmers are prominent in politics, an embargo seemed likely. Hence the warning to Australian dairy farmers, and to the butter trade generally.

The position was exactly as stated at that time, and in due course the matter was brought under the notice of the New Zealand Government in a direct way. Other interests, however, intervened, and the dairy farmers were disappointed. The timber milling and export section got busy, and succeeded in making out a sufficiently good case to block Parliamentary action. It was urged that mills would be laid idle, and men thrown out of work. That argument would not have sufficed, but the timber millers and exporters tackel it with another. They said: "Look here, what is the good of blocking the cutting and exporting of white pine? It is only losing money to the Dominion. If the white pine that we are dealing with is left it will only be burned by settlers clearing their land." This being unexpected was only weakly combated, and for the time being the millers and exporters prevailed. What they had said was only partly true. In a few instances white pine would be wasted in the manner indicated, but, generally speaking, all clumps of it would be preserved, for the reason that it is well worth while from the pocket point of view. The growing scarcity of the butter-box timber must render that obvious even to the onlooker. White pine is getting dearer almost every month. The easily accessible has mostly been cleared out long ago. What is now obtainable costs more to mill, and more to bring to rail and port. The price must go on increasing—increasing against the people of the Dominion as well as against the people of Australia. Is it likely that the farmers of New Zealand are going to submit? They are not men of that type.

It may be that the previous article in the "Herald" caused butter exporters here to give the subject serious attention. Some of them appear to have been moved to action, for a few months ago the dairy farmers of Taranaki were roused to protest by publication of the news that an Australian syndicate or company had purchased a local forest of kahikatea, thus securing for the Australian butter industry some millions of butter boxes (and depriving the New Zealand butter industry of a like number), and incidentally putting up the price of the timber. It hardly needs pointing out that if syndicates, companies, or individuals mop up all the isolated belts or patches of white pine, and hold or release the timber just as they deem fit, the price generally is bound to go higher and higher. The papers in the farming districts expressed local opinion with some emphasis, naturally standing for New Zealand interests as against Australian. For the time being, the Australian owners of the forest appeared to have the right to smile, but there is an old adage that operates just here. It is quite easy for the New Zealand Parliament to put a high export duty on white pine, and thus block its shipment altogether. It would also be possible (and from the New Zealand point of view quite justifiable) for the Government to resume the Australian-owned forest at its present value, so that it could not be held uncut, increasing in value year by year, and handicapping a highly important New Zealand industry. The farmers are not likely to allow local timber-milling and exporting interests to defeat them. They know now the arguments they have to meet. And the vast majority of the people would support the farmers. All of which serves to make it imperative that Australian butter exporters should be constantly experimenting with new materials for the packing of this commodity. Australian dairy farmers ought not remain inactive; each is directly concerned.

[Since the above was written it has been reported that the New Zealand National Efficiency Board has recommended the New Zealand Government to prohibit the export of all New Zealand timbers. This may be taken (if the report is correct) as an emergency measure, and no doubt representations in the interests of local industries concerned will be forcibly made by the Federal Government. Whatever the outcome, the incident serves to emphasise the warning given as to the need to consider the position in the future. —Ed. "S.M.H."]

RAT LEPROSY.

"Son of the Soil" writes:—I have read the account of the deliberations of the Royal Society in your issue of May 2 in reference to the possible connection between rat leprosy and human leprosy. I have seen leprous-stricken mice. What is the use of the Royal Society telling us that "if the etiology of rat leprosy were worked out we might find the solution of the human leprosy problem," if they do not help us to prevent our food from being contaminated by such pests? It is over 12 months since I wrote to Mr. W. M. Hughes in reference to assisting farmers to build silos on their own farms to preserve the seed wheat, but the letter was simply received. If we did not feed the mice and rats they would not be so numerous. But we have to thank the system of land settlement, and the selfishness and greed of certain individuals, for compelling the farmer to shell out all he has to get on the land, and leave him with nothing to fight pests and droughts. The Farmers and Settlers' Association of Murrumburrah and Harden deserves credit for a suggestion for storing wheat on the farm. Each farmer could by this means see the result of this method of stripping. Damp or unripe wheat put into a large silo might only spoil the harvested crop at the proper stage of ripeness. If wheat is required to support the Empire let us have commonsense organisation, instead of the present "every man for himself" variety. It's no wonder we have pests and plagues when we are not careful of the gifts nature has bestowed upon us.

HELPING A SOLDIER.

BERRIGAN.—At the instance of the local Repatriation Committee nineteen teams from neighbouring farms assembled at "Woodstock," Warmatta, to assist a returned soldier, C. Roe, who has taken up share wheat farming. In one day 120 acres were drilled, 60 acres cultivated, 60 acres harrowed, and 15 acres ploughed, under the supervision of Mr. G. R. M'Lellan.

STOCK RESERVES.

Mr. Robert Gibson, Harden, writes:—"The proposed control of stock reserves, altering present conditions, requires careful consideration. The question of the curtailment of any existing stock routes and reserves is of such importance that the proposal to dispense with our local boards dealing with same in open court should be resisted to the utmost."

ALLEGED TRESPASS.

BREWARRINA.—At the Brewarrina Police Court, before Mr. Hamblin, P.M., F. E. Miller, station manager, appeared against Leslie W. Anderson, A.W.U. organiser, for trespass on Tallawanta Station. Mr. Boulton, solicitor, of Bourke, appeared for the defendant. Defendant visited the property to serve a citation on the owner to appear before the Arbitration Court, but neglected to state his errand to the manager. On finding the organiser in one of the employee's rooms, the manager, who knew him to be an organiser, told him to get off the station. The defendant, ignoring the order, asked to see the owner, and served the paper on him, and was again told, so the manager deposed, to leave; but, taking no notice of this, the defendant slept there that night, and was seen by the owner near the stables next morning, and asked why he had not left, as ordered. He admitted after that seeing two or three of the employees about their union fees, and, having spent an hour or more there, left the station on his bicycle.

The P.M. held that he was not on the premises for an unlawful purpose, but was liable for persisting in stopping on the place after repeated warnings by the manager, even though the owner was on the premises. As, however, the evidence on both sides was uncorroborated, he dismissed the case, but made no order as to costs.

WINTER SCHOOL.

The Department of Agriculture advises that a number of vacancies still exist for students at the coming winter school at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College. The usual two courses of instruction are provided, viz., for farmers and for poultry keepers.

SHOWS.

KURRI KURRI.

KURRI KURRI.—The annual bird, dog, and horticultural show was opened in the Drill Hall and grounds by Mr. W. Kearsley, M.L.A., and proved one of the best recorded. The poultry section was a very fine feature, the bantams being probably the best, and was equal to anything held in the north. The Judge (Mr. C. Gregley) stated it was the best ever he had seen in eighteen years' experience.

The Champion of Champions

The Touch of the UNDERWOOD

as described by Margaret B. Owen four times World's Champion Typist,

"I attribute my success as a speed operator to the Underwood machine. I have tried all makes of typewriters but in my opinion the touch of the Underwood is the most perfect. The lightning-like return of the type-bars is the Underwood's great point, and for good work there is no question of its superiority to any other."

It justly holds all records for SPEED, ACCURACY and DURABILITY.

YOUR SUCCESS DEPENDS UPON THE TYPEWRITER AND THE SYSTEM OF INSTRUCTION you have undergone, no less than upon your own personal skill. You can learn at Stott's Business College to operate the Underwood by precisely the same "touch method" that enabled Miss Owen to acquire her wonderful speed.

THE UNDERWOOD EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT supplies employers with typists of ability without charge to either party. This is a very live branch of our service—331 calls for typists were registered during the first four months of this year and 238 positions were filled from Stott's Business College—over 1000 opportunities per annum for Stott's students in Sydney.

GERMANY AND PEACE.

Mr. Watkins, in his speech at Newcastle on Thursday night, took his stand on three propositions, each of which must be accepted by every man who has weighed the evidence and is open to conviction. The first is that no peace could be obtained now consistent with the national ideals of the Australian or any other free people, nor could such a peace have been obtained at any time during the war. The second is that the German Socialists have not the power, nor have the majority of their party the inclination, to help us in obtaining such a peace. The third is that the issues of the war concern us as closely as any of the belligerents, as closely, indeed, as the French or the Belgians. Mr. Watkins went back to the first of the international conferences, at which the German Socialists refused to agree with their comrades from France and Great Britain in a resolution to fight against all wars. Their conduct then was accepted by the German military party as an intimation that they could develop their plans in security, and is handsomely acknowledged by Prince Bulow, who laid the foundation for this war. In other countries some incurable optimism or some tendency to believe that their own creed must be held by their neighbours prevented the Socialists of France and Great Britain from giving the German dissent its true meaning. Up till the outbreak of war the Socialists of France and Great Britain believed that the aggressive spirit of Germany would be met from within, and the Socialists of France accepted German assistance in fighting the efforts of their own statesmen to strengthen their army. The first six months of the war destroyed all illusions. It was proved to demonstration that in mind and conscience there was no distinction between the Socialists and the Pan-Germans. The great Socialist newspapers of Berlin and Vienna were as savagely exultant over the early victories and the march on Paris as the professors or the clergy. In the ensuing three and a half years their conduct has been quite consistent. They have been closely affected by the miseries of the people, and, therefore, impatient with the length of the war; but in the hour of triumph they have been no more inclined to a just or durable peace than the Prussian oligarchs. In Australia, where a belief in German pacificism still lingers, some regard might be had to the history of the last German strikes, and to the answer to the manifesto of the International Labour party. The strikers were refused strike pay by the trades unionists, and condemned by their representatives in Parliament. The Allied manifesto was answered by a refusal not on the ground that the terms were unjust or not likely to bring about a permanent settlement, but on the ground that while Germany was victorious she would take and keep whatever she could get. The German Socialists have a perfectly good answer to the charge of insincerity. They have shown their kinship with the Emperor and his Government by their conduct, if not by their speeches. Their professions of faith in democracy have suggested to successive Chancellors that they might be used to mislead opinion in France or Great Britain or the United States. Their success in these countries has been negligible. If they have been more successful in Australia it is not because they have put forward a different case, but because they have found an audience unwilling to face the truth and anxious to support itself by any suggestion prejudicial to the Allied cause.

Mr. Watkins's first and second propositions are, to a certain extent, interdependent. If the German nation was inclined to a just peace and was able to assert itself, the military party would be compelled to moderate its desires for the sake of self-preservation. The extent of its moderation has been shown in the peace treaties with Russia and Roumania, and in the abandonment of the Reichstag resolution which forbade it to exact either indemnities or territory. Flushed with victory the Germans have proclaimed that the nation which makes peace with them must suffer the penalties of defeat. A nation might buy concessions by deserting its Allies and gain a temporary security in return for permanent isolation and contempt. The possession of an army in being would not save France, Great Britain, or Italy from the fate of Russia. The test must be victory or defeat. If the Allies are victorious, they may make a peace in which every nation may follow the line of development suited to its genius. If they fail, the world must be moulded according to the German plan, and every individual in it must shape his life accord ing to the German conception of human nature. The interest of Australia in any terms of peace is that of every civilised country. No country in touch with the rest of the world can be indifferent to a decision which determines whether force or right rules mankind, whether men are to be governed by military despots or by themselves, whether for the future man in his relation to the State is to be regarded as a being to be educated and cared for that he may provide the material for another great war. Beyond any other civilised country, however, Australia has the interest of her isolation, her wealth, and the aversion of her people from all kinds of military discipline. Australia is vitally interested in a victory which would ensure the maintenance of the British Empire. Defeat or compromise means the absorption of the whole country in military preparations for years to come. It means poverty and economic subjection through such treaties as Germany has imposed on Russia and Roumania. It means, ultimately, conquest by a foreign Power. These dangers are by no means remote. They are the certain consequences of defeat, and defeat has once more become an imminent danger through the German victories in France. The alternative is freedom as a member of the British Empire, but freedom, as Mr. Watkins has said, carries its obligations with it, and those who think that they can profess a love of freedom, and use it as a means of shirking their duty, must become either slaves or the parasites of better men.

STATE FINANCE.

Important measures to be discussed in the session of Parliament to commence on Wednesday relate to finance. Judging by the eleven months of the financial year already elapsed, the position is not unfavourable. The probabilities are that the year will end with a surplus. At present the expenditure is, in round figures, £1,200,000 in advance of the revenue, but the last month of the year is that in which the revenue is always the heaviest, for the reason that the income tax is then collected. The last month may be estimated to show, after allowing for payments to the Public Works Fund, an excess of revenue over expenditure amounting to about a million and a half, which would give a surplus to be placed against the deficits of the previous two years, those deficits amounting in all to £483,000. The expenditure from revenue during the eleven months increased by a little over half a million. Payments on account of interest showed an addition of £300,000; the expenditure in the business undertakings—the railways, the Harbour Trust, and the Water and Sewerage Boards of the metropolis and Newcastle—decreased about £7000, while the purely governmental expenditure increased by a quarter of a million. Whether any of this has been due to increases of the salary account cannot yet be ascertained from the figures which the Government publishes, but it may be taken that a large part of it, if not the whole, is due to increased costs of material. Turning to other accounts, very drastic reductions have been made compared with the eleven months of 1916-17. The Public Works account shows a reduction of £84,000, but the amount actually expended this year is less by £195,000, since this year's expenditure has been burdened with £129,000 expended last year, while the amount of this year's expenditure not already brought into this year's account is only a little over £17,800. The amount spent from loan money is also more favourable than the reduction shown in the accounts indicates. That reduction is £2,190,000. The reduction is really almost two and a half millions, through the operation of the loans suspense account.

It may be taken for granted that the loan expenditure this year will total a little over five millions. The Government is credited with desiring to limit the expenditure from these accounts in the coming year to four millions. A final payment of two millions will be made under the Norton-Griffith contract. An attempt will be made to raise the other two millions locally, since the London market is closed to all borrowing for other than war purposes. This was made abundantly clear last week when it was announced that the British Government had directed the banks not to pay more than 3 per cent. interest on fixed deposits, the object being to force more of the savings from income into the war loan. The local market will be the only refuge for the Government, since all the creditor countries are devoting all their income except that necessary for sustenance to the prosecution of the war. It seems that we in Australia alone can carry on our part of the war and spend large sums from loan on public works as well. The Government is also credited with the intention of raising more money by means of the income tax. It might naturally be asked (if the forecast of the accounts balancing on the right side of the ledger is realised) what need is there for increasing taxation, seeing that the expenditure for the coming year should not be allowed to mount? The answer is that the Government considers itself bound to advance the salaries of the teachers in the lower grades to at least what it recognises as a living wage—£150 a year. With the increase which has taken place in the cost of living many of these teachers must feel themselves hard put to it to make ends meet. No one would begrudge the increase to these men and women. They are largely forming the lives of the growing generation, and on that ground alone, if not on the ground of mere justice, they should be paid a salary which will enable them to live and be examples to those under their charge. The income tax is not to be increased, but it is to be extended so as to bring within its scope many of those who now escape by reason of high exemptions. But if the exemptions are high it must also be remembered that the commencing rate of tax is high—11d in the £, including supertax. It will never do to make this the rate of tax on the lower incomes. To extend the State tax downwards will not be altogether a bad proposition, since there are now too many voters who do not directly feel taxation. An increase in the number of taxpaying voters will widely increase the number who will vote with a greater sense of responsibility. It should be borne in mind that the Commonwealth Government will probably further exploit the same field of taxation, and the Commonwealth Government must at this time have first consideration. Its tax will be a war tax.

THE WORLD OUTLOOK.

SIR WM. IRVINE'S SPEECH.

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

Replying to the toast of the Chief Justice and the Lieutenant-Governor of Victoria, at a smoke night concert held at the Commercial Travellers' Club on Saturday night, Sir William Irvine said that as he had been invited not to remain silent on all public affairs he would say a word or two in regard to the war. It was perhaps inevitable in a country like this, which had always enjoyed complete immunity from all danger, that we should have got into the habit of thinking that come what might this little population was going to be protected by some power, human or divine. This war, however, had thrown us back a thousand years in the history of the world. We would have after the war new duties and new responsibilities, on which would depend the maintenance of our national existence, and of the liberties on which we prided ourselves. If Germany gained a real victory on the Western front she would obtain absolute domination in Europe. If that were obtained our supremacy of the ocean—on which our security depended—could only last for a few years. He had, however, the fullest faith that Germany would not succeed on the Western front, and that she would not conquer in this war. (Applause.) But, no matter what victory we achieved, we could not so control and crush the Central Powers as to give us the full measure of that security which we had enjoyed for the last 100 years. We would have to learn as a community that we did not live for ourselves, but for the whole Empire, of which we formed a part. (Applause.) For a generation we would have a tense struggle to maintain those things which we had enjoyed without a struggle at all. It would be essential for the maintenance of liberty, as we had known it, that there should be a closer and stronger bond of union between all those nations which spoke the English language. (Applause.) And how small would seem all those petty jealousies which had hitherto divided the English-speaking peoples. To those who had been unable to take part in the actual struggle there remained the duty of taking their part in meeting and helping to solve the social and economic problems which the war had created; and he hoped that they would all be found doing that good work together. (Applause.)

BRITAIN'S MOTTO.

"STICK IT."

COL. ABBOTT DESCRIBES WAR POSITION.

A member of the small band of Australia's soldier-politicians, Lieutenant-Colonel P. P. Abbott, M.P., C.M.G., returned to Sydney on Saturday after an absence of over three years in Gallipoli, Egypt, France, and the United Kingdom.

Colonel Abbott, in spite of his experiences, looked stout and well. He motored direct to the Anzac Buffet after leaving the Melbourne express to meet a number of old friends. In conversation with a "Herald" reporter, he said he would not refer to politics in Australia. Parties had changed, and he would prefer to wait until he secured a grip of what seemed to him to be a rather complicated position politically. "But I will tell you this," he went on. "Anybody who talked about peace by negotiation in Britain to-day would be pole-axed. The peace party there had an uninterrupted run for a time, but then public feeling routed them, and to-day they are not heard. The motto of the United Kingdom is 'Stick it,' and I would pass on this motto to Australia. Britain, I think, has learned a lesson from the recent withdrawal. The capture by the Allies of a large strip of muddy country and rusty barbed-wire on the Somme did not help the Allies to bring the end of the war nearer. Germany returned, and recaptured the territory. This brought the end no nearer. The end will come when one nation can fight no longer, and you can take it from me that Britain will never give in. She is prepared to 'stick it' to the end. The Americans' man-power has saved the situation. The old Jingo song sounds true at last, for we've got the ships, we've got the men, and we've got the money, too. It is certain we will get them in the end.

BRITISH POLITICS.

"The production of war materials in Britain is going on unchecked, thanks to the magnificent manner in which women are replacing men combed-out for the firing line. Mr. Lloyd George has his critics. Many people would prefer the scion of an old family at the head of affairs. England still loves an aristocrat, but the majority of the people know nobody as capable as Lloyd George, and are satisfied. Personally, I believe that Mr. Balfour makes the bullets which Mr. Lloyd George fires. He is the brains and masterpiece of the Government. The Prime Minister is the gun. Besides these men there are other brilliant brains in the War Cabinet. Many of the old school have given way to successful business men. I was amazed in the British Parliament by the brevity of the speeches. A quarter of an hour is allowed a member to expound his views. A man who tried to speak for an hour would not be heard. This is on account of the fact that the House is controlling the destinies of England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, and the dominions. The time is not very distant, however, when an Imperial Parliament will deal with Imperial affairs. As soon as the war is over a scheme which is now in hand will be launched, by which matters affecting Great Britain will be dealt with in the British Parliament. Imperial affairs will be placed in the hands of a tribunal comprising men versed in affairs oversea. To-day the British statesman has only an official knowledge of Australia's aspirations. He knows little of our problems and desires to excel.

Six million women have been placed on the electoral rolls of Britain, and they are eagerly awaiting the arrival of Mr. Hughes to shape their destinies. He is accepted as their leader. At last they know their power. Before the war man was the top dog in Britain, but I think a great change will come over affairs now that female adult suffrage has arrived.

BREAKING UP BATTALIONS.

Colonel Abbott, referring to the shortage of Australian reinforcements going forward, said so far General Birdwood had been only compelled to split up one battalion from each division. This was very hard for men who had learned the meaning of esprit de corps, but worse things lay ahead, he feared. "In France to-day," he added, "an Australian feels disheartened when he is called upon to lower his colour patches for ever. Even the French civilians have come to know the colours of our famous battalions. As one of our famous fighting units moved up to the line recently through a threatened village, elderly civilians and children assembled in the main street and cheered the men, saying among themselves, 'The Boches will never shif these men.' They were right, too; but shortly afterwards the men were deprived of their colours and distributed among other units of the Australian Imperial Force. Every man working behind the lines in France and the United Kingdom, and who is fit to carry a pack has been sent into the line, and I am glad to hear that the authorities have made a beginning in Australia in this direction.

"Men cannot fight for Australia here. The fields of France should be their objective. I do not favour giving recruits much training in Australia. They have to unlearn much of their Australian training as soon as they get to England. A sudden change in the fighting in France demands different training. Nearly two years ago Major-General Monash found that the training his men had received in Australia was no use to them when they reached Europe.

"The desire of men to join the Flying Corps has not lessened. Australians have a keen liking for this class of work, but selection has to be made very carefully. An infantryman, for instance, with shattered nerves is of no use at all. A man must be young, fairly light, and keyed up in all senses to fly in France just now. It is most important and very dangerous work. To accept every man who volunteered would be a waste of men, money, and machines.

"NOW OR NEVER."

"The reputation of the Australian fighting man never stood higher in the estimation of the British and French peoples than it does to-day. When the Australian wounded arrive at a London terminus the station is packed and the lads, as they are carried from the trains to the waiting cars, are bombarded with flowers and cheers. In France it is the same. Our recent joining up with the French poilu has brought the Australians and the French soldier together for the first time. They mutually admire each other. The German hates them both. By means of raids of varying strengths the Australian troops have made the life of the assembled German armies one of constant unrest. They have been kept on the qui vive throughout and deprived of rest. As attackers and raiders the Australians have no peers. Their dash, strength, and temperament bewilder Fritz. He says so when he comes into the sunken roads, and his appearance bears out his admissions.

"A German officer captured recently said, 'We have staked everything on this great move. It is only just starting. Do not think because you have stopped us we are finished. But if we fail on all fronts we know we can never convince the powers that be at home that the future holds out victory. It is a case of now or never.'"

EXPORT PARITY ADOPTED.

MELBOURNE, Saturday.

An important decision was arrived at by the Federal Cabinet to-day regarding the price of meat. Ministers discussed for over two hours the alternative proposals to the Interstate Commission's recommendations, submitted by the Minister in charge of price fixing (Mr. Massey Greene).

At the conclusion of the meeting the Acting Prime Minister (Mr. Watt) made the following announcement: "The Government has decided to fix the price of meat. The fixed price is to be based upon the export parity, and is to relate to cash retail sales. The Minister, Mr. Greene, is taking the necessary steps to give effect to this determination with due regard to differences of quality, locality, and seasons."

In reply to a question, Mr. Watt stated that the scheme would be brought into operation as soon as possible.

JOURNALISTS FOR ENGLAND

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

The Acting Prime Minister, Mr. Watt, stated to-night that the invitations for the 12 editors or proprietors to visit England would be issued to-morrow.

NEW ZEALAND REPRESENTATIVES.

WELLINGTON, N.Z., Sunday.

The following Press delegates have been selected to visit England and the Western front, at the invitation of the Imperial authorities:—Messrs. G. Fenwick ("Otago Daily Times"), M. Reading ("Lyttelton Times"), C. Earle ("The Dominion," Wellington), W. J. Geddes, M.L.C., ("Times," Wellington), R. Hacket ("New Zealand Herald," Auckland), and F. Pirani ("Feilding Star").

ITALY'S DAY.

Martin-place and Moore-street will present the gay appearance of a picturesque Italian piazza on the 28th inst. Every stall will be surmounted with a striped awning of red, white, and green, and decorated in the same national colour, which should blend harmoniously with the numerous fancy dresses typical of the occasion to be worn by pretty "female brigands."

A public meeting will be held under the auspices of the Haberfield branch of the Red Cross Society in the local School of Arts at 8 o'clock to-night to form an organisation to assist Italy's Day. Signora Fiaschi, who served six months on active service with the Italian troops, and Mr. E. Gard Trouton, one of the honorary secretaries of the Italian Red Cross Day Fund, will address the gathering.

To organise assistance in the district for the Italian Red Cross Day Fund, the Mayor of Balmain has called a public meeting in the Town Hall at 8.30 o'clock to-night. Alderman T. H. Kelly, hon. secretary of the fund, will speak.

All denominations of the official raffle books may now be obtained from Mr. G. C. Goodall, at Dalton House.

Mr. James Chalmers has given a very fine necklet of antique Chinese amber and jade to be disposed of in aid of the Italian R.C.D. Fund.

Miss Ivy Burnham, who has raised considerable sums for previous funds, will have her troupe of Dixie Strollers in their unique costume patrolling the city on a perambulating lorry on Italy's Day.

IN THE COUNTRY.

A committee has been formed at Bowral, with Mr. Gavan George (manager of Commercial Bank) as hon. treasurer and Miss M. Adkins, hon. secretary, to assist the Italy's Day movement. Owing to the lateness of the season it was considered too cold to have stalls in the streets, but a house-to-house collection and sale of buttons and badges was arranged.

INTERESTS IN THE PACIFIC.

A BRITISH COMMISSION.

At this time, when the attention of all thoughtful men should be turned to the consideration of future British interests in the Pacific, the report of the Interstate Commission of Australia on "British and Australian Trade in the South Pacific," published in April last, is worth noting. The conclusions arrived at in that report, pages 116 to 118, may specially be marked. The Commissioners state:—

"The government of the islands controlled by the British Crown is at present lacking in cohesion and unity of policy. . . . The commission is satisfied that the islands under the British Crown should be grouped under a more coherent system. . . . The commission has suggested that, in order to ensure timely settlement of this paramount question of government, a joint inquiry by representatives of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand should be undertaken."

In the course of conversation with a representative of the "Herald" one of the British Commissioners in the Pacific said yesterday:—"The suggestion put forward by Mr. Piddington and his co-commissioners that a conjoint commission of inquiry should be appointed at an early date should, in my opinion, be carefully considered by the public of the Commonwealth. The question as to whether administrative powers should be granted to such a commission which would represent the interests of the Imperial Government, of the Commonwealth, and of the Dominion of New Zealand, is one which also claims the full consideration of statesmen. British interests at present are widely spread under many forms of control, and difficulties are constantly created by the lack of effective co-operation. Great Britain, Australia, and New Zealand are carrying on the work of administration through officers who have no direct relation with each other. There are Crown colonies, Fiji, and the Gilbert and Ellice Island colony, the Imperial Protectorate of the Solomon Islands, Australian dependencies, such as Papua, and the islands of the southern portion under the civil administration of New Zealand. To add to this diversity of control we now have the military occupation by Australia and by New Zealand of the late German Pacific possessions. It is a maze of control with centres of reference in London, Melbourne, and Wellington, and there is no present means by which the work carried on in one group may be quickly co-ordinated in case of emergency, even by way of obtaining or giving information. Objection may be taken, no doubt, to the grant of administrative powers at present to any commission. The war is still on, and it may be urged that little can be done—at least, so far as the late German Pacific possessions are concerned—till the issue of it is known. But pending peace, why not appoint a board or commission to obtain information and, as far as possible, to simplify the existing administration by bringing the difficulties of each point of control into the ken of all? The commission could thus put the interests of Great Britain, of Australia, and of New Zealand into a common pool for the moment by a definite range of inquiry, and when the Peace Conference sits much valuable information should be available. The Interstate Commission has certainly paved the way."

SYRIANS AND THE WAR.

The Syrian Marounite Progress Association of Australia tendered the patron of the association, Mons. A. Chayet, Consul-General for France, a farewell dinner at Paris House last week. There was a representative gathering of the members of the association and of the Syrian community. The chair was occupied by the president, Mr. A. Coorey, who honoured the toast of the King and President. The toast of "France" was proposed by the Rev. Joseph Dahdah, who outlined the good work France had done, particularly in the present war.

Mr. Albert J. Kayrooz supported the toast, and expressed the sincere gratitude of the Syrian community to France, who at all times and in all places protected them. He stated that after the massacres of 1860 had it not been for the intervention of France there would have been very few Syrians alive to-day.

The toast of the Consul-General was proposed by the Rev. A. Yazbeck, and supported by Mr. J. K. Bellamy, vice-president, who assured the Consul-General of the great sorrow which filled the heart of every member of the Syrian community at his projected departure. M. Chayet, in responding, thanked the Commonwealth Government for conceding to the wishes of his Government in reference to the welfare of the Syrian community in Australia.

"The Allies" was proposed by Mr. G. Allan, and supported by Mr. S. Coorey and Mr. A. D. Aboud, who eulogised Great Britain for the great part she had taken in the great war, and expressed their admiration of the brave and gallant Australians who were playing so prominent a part in the conflict.

The evening concluded with the singing of the National Anthem and the "Marseillaise."

LOYAL UNIONISTS.

BRISBANE, Sunday.

At a special meeting of members of the Queensland branch of the Printing Industry Employees' Union of Australia, held at the Trades Hall on Saturday night, a motion was carried by 130 to 1, after a heated debate, in favour of dissociating the union from sentiments expressed in a series of resolutions on the war situation which were reported to have been carried at a meeting of the Industrial Council on May 30 last; and that the appointment of the union's representatives on such council be cancelled forthwith. The meeting concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

CAPT. CARMICHAEL.

FAREWELL SPEECH.

WAR AGAINST DESPOTISM.

TRAITORS DENOUNCED.

Since his return to Australia on furlough Captain Carmichael, M.C., has faced many wonderful demonstrations, but the fierce light that beats upon this soldier, military organiser, and Parliamentarian, was intensified on Saturday afternoon, when his speech to the electors of Leichhardt was punctuated by flashes of lightning. Thunder roared at intervals, and heavy rain fell, but Captain Carmichael continued his speech quietly. "This reminds me of France," he said amid applause.

The early return to the Western front of the local member, at the head of the battalion he has raised and administered, made a special appeal to the patriotic people of Leichhardt, and they refused to allow climatic conditions to damp their enthusiasm. At two o'clock, when a procession of mounted police, military bands, returned wounded soldiers (from Broughton Hall, Leichhardt), members of "Car.'s" battalion, now in camp, the Red Cross Society, V.A.Ds., the local band, visiting Mayors and Leichhardt Council, cadets, boy scouts, friendly societies, and school children moved off from the corner of Parramatta-road and Catherine-street to Leichhardt Park, well over a mile away, rain began to fall, but not a processionist fell out. Captain Carmichael and Mrs. Carmichael rode in the centre of the throng in a motor car draped with Union Jacks and flags of the Allies. Almost every house en route hung out flags, and the occupants of the houses came out of their houses to cheer. It was an intensely stirring scene. Men in the streets who sold buttons of "Car." did a brisk business, and scores of cameras were levelled at the procession as it made its way to the local park. Rain was now falling steadily, but inside the enclosure a huge crowd of people was assembled.

The Mayor of Leichhardt (Ald. A. B. Blackmore) presided, and, on behalf of the local people, wished Captain Carmichael God speed and a safe and speedy return.

VIGOROUS SPEECH BY MR. FLOWERS.

The president of the Legislative Council, Mr. F. Flowers, said he had no time for people who decried what Australia had done in the war. Considering the distance we were away from the scene of conflict we had responded magnificently. It was very difficult to make the average man or woman here understand that Australia was in great danger.

A voice: Nobody would throw flowers at you, anyway.

"Thank God I have two Flowers at the front to-day. (Applause.) It is a great pity we have such degenerates as this man in our midst. They are cranks and a menace to the country. (Loud applause.) Peace proposals do not represent the spirit of our people. Cranks, degenerates, and weaklings only talk of negotiating with Germany for peace. Let us beat her first. (Applause.) Although I am one who would like to see our burden in regard to men and money spread over a greater number of people, I would never speak on behalf of those who would have us relax our efforts. We have not won a round of the war, so far, but we are going to win this fight. An Englishman always needed two black eyes to stir him up. We have these, and will need a lot of stopping. (Applause.) In spite of evil influences here Australia will never become Germanised. (Applause.)"

Captain Carmichael was given an ovation on rising to speak. He was presented with a handsome banner of the colour of his battalion, on which was worked "Car.'s Thousand, Leichhardt, 1918," and a boomerang. The banner was handed over by the Mayor, on behalf of the residents of Leichhardt.

"A FIGHT TO THE DEATH."

In reply, Captain Carmichael said it was with feelings of great regret that he bade farewell to the people of Leichhardt for the second time. He had hoped there would be no necessity. The call of duty, more insistent now than before, had decreed otherwise. "This is a fight to the death," he went on. "To me there can be no halfway house between liberty and tyranny. We climb painfully to the sunlit heights of freedom, or we slide back into the marsh of despotism. It has always been; it always will be so. It is this issue that has overshadowed all others, including politics. All political parties have not only been drawn into it, but have declared the beliefs that influence their actions in regard to the war. On this issue alone I was re-elected unopposed at the last election, and you naturally expect me on leaving you to make some statement in regard to it. During the years of peace we built up a party that always said it was actuated by a full belief in economic freedom, free from oppression and intimidation under the widest democratic constitution. We have now to fight for that against a despotism that threatens its extinction. I look on the man who will not do this as a traitor to his party, to himself, and to his country. I find the party with which I have worked in past years taking a stand in regard to the great issue that either co-operates with our enemies or deserts our cause at the moment of its greatest need.

LABOUR COUNCIL CONDEMNED.

"The Trades and Labour Council, which is the central authority for the industrial side, has come to a decision which practically means withdrawing from the war. The political side, less candid, has declined to declare itself as a party, and some express themselves as theoretically in favour of recruiting, but are inactive, and give no practical evidence of their belief. If a battalion were being heavily engaged at the front, and another placed in support stood back evincing a mild friendly interest, but refused to act, how would they be judged? This is the great hour of our freedom's fate. It is no time for the political Laodicean who is neither hot nor cold, and whose timidity courts the fate his impotence deserves. (Loud applause.)

"I am heart and soul in fighting this war to a finish—a victorious finish—for if we have the unconquerable will, the courage never to submit or yield, we cannot be overcome. I do not subscribe to the action and inaction of the Australian Labour party in this great issue. I still believe, and after the war, if I return, will use my best endeavours towards further establishing those democratic principles for which I have always fought. If an election takes place before my return I shall offer myself as a candidate for the old seat—the only one I have ever represented—as a war candidate, and I hope you will continue to believe that to be the great issue issue as long as the war lasts. If in the ordinary chances of war I do not return, I ask you in the election of a successor to keep the same issue before you, and refuse to accept any man who is not prepared to work strenuously for the protection of our hard-won liberty. (Cheers.)

"Now, I wish to utter a word of warning to you and the people of New South Wales. Peace is a long way off. In the months to come you will be called upon to bear heavier burdens than in the past, the sorrows of greater bereavements, the continuing dread of impending defeat drawing ever nearer, and financial strain that will test your patriotism to the last strand of its fibre; you will be tried to the uttermost, but I believe you will not be found wanting in that grim tenacity of purpose without which a nation has no future. Let us take it like men, let us face the future with a full and certain hope that strong, purified, and enlightened Australia will emerge from the sea of trouble strong in its endurance, purified in its beliefs, and enlightened in its democracy." (Loud applause.)

VIOLET DAY.

Yesterday many new arrivals by train from Queensland, Victoria, and Tasmania, en route for the front, were entertained at the Soldiers' Club immediately after landing in Sydney. High tea and music and hot baths made Sydney seem a good place to be in.

All the arrangements for Violet Day, both in city and suburbs, are well forward. The sale of house service flags exceeds all expectations. The committee ask householders and heads of business houses to display them at once in their windows, also that motorists shall fly the violet silken pennants and reserve them for Violet Day.

The tickets for the Violet Day concert, in St. James's Hall, on Wednesday, June 12, are selling well, and the Dance of the Dixie Girls is promising much success.

The ladies in charge of the violet order department ask that orders shall be sent as early as possible to facilitate their work.

On Tuesday evening members of all the club's patriotic circles are asked to meet at the Soldiers' Club, at 7 p.m., and join in a "hidden treasure evening" after the business meeting.

SICK PAY FOR SOLDIERS.

MELBOURNE, Saturday.

The Federal Ministry has under consideration the question of allowing sick pay in certain instances to returned soldiers in temporary employment of the Public Service. The Public Service Act makes no provision for sick pay for temporary employees in their first year of service, but as many of the soldiers are frequently absent from work owing to wounds sustained in active service, or illness contracted in the field, it is considered that they should have special consideration. In all probability, sick pay will be allowed where it is shown that ill-health has arisen as a result of war service.

ALLIES GAIN GROUND

VILLAGES RETAKEN

AMERICANS HELP

LONDON, June 8.

A French communique, issued on Friday afternoon, stated: North of Montdidier and west of Noyon, we carried out several successful coups-de-main, and took prisoners.

North of the Aisne we, by a night attack, captured the village of Le Port, west of Fontenoy. South of the Aisne we improved our positions south-east of Ambleny.

Between the Ourcq and the Marne we continued local operations.

In the region of Neuilly-la-Poterie we increased our progress, and captured the village of Vinly, north of Olignon, also the woods east of the station of Neuilly-la-Poterie. We also gained possession of the outskirts north of this village.

Further south American troops gained ground on the front of Torcy, Belleu, and Bouresches. West of Chateau Thierry a spirited attack gave us Hill 204.

Between the Marne and Reims British troops regained a footing in the village of Bligny, and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. We took 100 prisoners in these actions.

A French communique on Friday night stated: Between the Ourcq and the Marne we successfully continued local operations. French and American troops extended their gains north of Cauly to Chesy. They captured Neuilly-la-Poterie and Bouresches, appreciably improving their positions on the front from Torcy to Bouresches.

Between the Marne and Reims the action against Bligny continued, resulting in the capture of the entire village. Two hundred prisoners were taken during the day.

Thirteen German aeroplanes were brought down. Twenty-seven tons of bombs were dropped in the region of Roye, St. Quentin, and Soissons, with good results.

A French communique on Saturday afternoon stated: There is rather great artillery activity on the front south of the Aisne, notably in the region of Faverolles. We improved our positions south-east of Ambleny during the night.

We continued our pressure south of the Ourcq, and made new progress. We carried our lines as far as the western outskirts of Dammard (SW of Neuilly St. Front) to east of Chesy, and over a kilometre north of Neuilly-la-Poterie. We took 50 prisoners.

Further south the enemy twice violently attacked our positions on the Bouresches-Le-Thiollet front. The attacks were shattered with heavy losses. The night was relatively calm elsewhere.

An American official message states: In an attack north-west of Chateau Thierry on Thursday morning, we, in conjunction with the French, advanced our line south of Torcy, about a mile, capturing prisoners, and inflicting heavy losses in killed and wounded.

FLANDERS FRONT.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting at noon on Friday, stated: We raided a post on Thursday night, north-east of Bethune, inflicting casualties, and captured a machine gun, without losses.

Sir Douglas Haig on Friday evening reported: The French improved their line in the neighbourhood of Locre by a successful local attack, taking a few prisoners. We raided a post in the Strazeele sector at daylight, taking nine prisoners.

We brought down 14 and drove down eight enemy aeroplanes. Anti-aircraft guns forced down another. One British machine was lost. We dropped 28 tons of bombs in the daytime on Thursday, and 11 tons at night time. Our targets included Valenciennes, Le Cateau, Busigny, and St. Quentin.

Sir Douglas Haig's noon report on Saturday stated: We took a few prisoners during last night in a successful raid in the neighbourhood of Hulluch. Our patrols inflicted casualties in the Strazeele sector. Hostile artillery has been active northward of Albert and south-eastward of Arras.

GERMAN CLAIM.

(Admiralty—Per Wireless Press.)

A German official report on Friday stated: We took 52 French prisoners during our advance westward of Kemmel.

We captured lines astride the Ardre, south-eastward of Sarcy, taking 300 prisoners.

THE AMERICANS.

WHAT THEIR WEIGHT WILL MEAN.

War experts are insisting on the far-reaching significance of the appearance of American forces in the battle of the Marne. The Supreme Allied War Council, envisaging the war from the standpoint of strategic reserve, rely on American armies to end the struggle, and give the British and French a reserve power which may even enable Russia to throw off the Teuton bondage, and participate in the final struggle.

It must also be remembered that the German casualties already have far exceeded the amount killed and wounded agreed upon between the Pan-German and Socialist leaders when the desirability of the present offensive was mooted.

A GALLANT EPISODE.

A typical American episode, just disclosed, occurred at Jaulgonne, where the French were holding the northern edge of the loop formed by the Marne. The Germans succeeded in throwing across 22 light bridges, each allowing two abreast. Two battalions of infantry succeeded in crossing, and forming a bridgehead in the railway station, assisted by six machine-guns.

The French ordered a counter-attack. Cavalry made a frontal attack on the station, while infantry were attacking the rear. Both failed owing to the German machine-gunners, until American machine-gunners came into the fight, and supported the frontal attack. This enabled the infantry to strike the German rear. A few Germans escaped by swimming, also two boatloads of 40 men. The French and Americans took 100 prisoners, and all the machine-guns. The rest of the German battalion was destroyed.

The French are enthusiastic over the splendid bravery and self-sacrifice which the Americans displayed at Jaulgonne; also in the wood-fighting at Neuilly-la-Poterie, where the American machine-gunners enabled the French to surprise a German detachment and rout them.

FIGHT IN THE AIR.

Five British aeroplanes fought seven Germans over the North Sea. The Germans retired, losing one machine, which fell into the sea in flames.

IMMEDIATE DANGER OVER.

THE UNCERTAIN FUTURE.

LONDON, June 7.

The correspondent of the Australian Press Association learns that the enemy's progress for the time being has been checked. The immediate danger is over, but until it is known where Prince Rupprecht's reserves will be thrown in the anxiety will continue.

The Germans show reluctance directly to attack Reims, where the defence is well prepared, and would involve the enemy in heavy losses. He has nothing to gain by the capture of the city unless he is able to drive the French sufficiently far back to enable him to make use of the good lateral communications between Soissons and Reims. Since June 3 the enemy's efforts have been merely local endeavouring to improve his positions and secure river crossings.

The Germans have used 41 divisions since May 27. Few of these belong to the armies to the eastward of the Crown Prince's army, the bulk being the Crown Prince's own reserves. The Germans still are quite free to concentrate either for an advance against Paris or Amiens. The Allies labour at a disadvantage in maintaining a long line with a large number of vulnerable points, such as the lines of communication between Paris and the Channel ports. We are unable to keep a large concentration of reserves. These must be spread over a greater extent than we could wish, while the Germans are able to concentrate rapidly on a definite point.

Moreover we have been driven so far back that we have little room to manoeuvre, and cannot retire farther without exposing our vital objects. We must therefore fight where we stand. There is no cause for the slightest despondency. We have ample reason for confidence, owing to the splendid fighting qualities of the French and the great competence of the High Command. Our army feels the highest pride and confidence in General Foch. The German claims of 55,000 prisoners and 600 guns are probably exaggerated, but when the rapid retreat is considered the loss is not great, even if the German estimate is true. The work of the French staff in destroying and removing stores was excellent.

THE VITAL QUESTION.

General Maurice, writing in the "Daily Chronicle" commenting on the declaration of the Supreme War Council and M. Clemenceau's speech, says: Speaking bluntly, we are now in the same situation as in 1914, when our Allies were obliged to hold on until we threw in our new armies. And now having failed adequately to prepare for the new situation, which results from Russia's collapse, are again holding on until America throws in her weight. The vital question, meanwhile, is whose effectives are dwindling the more quickly?

General Maurice details the measures taken, and sums up by saying that apparently we have again let the enemy get a start by allowing him to train fresh drafts before ours were ready.

THE BRITISH FRONT.

GERMAN FAILURES.

Mr. Percival Phillips on Thursday night telegraphed: Enemy raids constitute the sole activity on the British front. All have bee lamentable failures, the Australians being the heroes of the fighting. The following was a typical raid. At least 200 picked German infantry participated in an expedition against the Australians south of Morlancourt. They expected to catch the Australians napping, but their disillusionment could not have been more complete. The Australians took 21 prisoners and four machine-guns, and 25 bodies were counted in No-Man's-Land.

Other raids were north of Lens, north-east of Hinges, near La Bassee, eastward of Nieppe Forest, and southward of Ypres. In all of these the enemy left prisoners in our hands. In only one place were British soldiers kidnapped.

ENEMY'S HEAVY AIR LOSSES.

It is reliably stated that British aircraft during May brought down 398 German aeroplanes and drove down 100. Guns brought down 20 enemy machines, and 128 British machines are missing.

BRITAIN'S FOOD.

REASSURING STATEMENT.

In the House of Commons on Friday Mr. J. R. Clynes (Parliamentary Secretary to the Food Control Department), in the course of a statement on the food situation, said that Britain carried heavier burdens perhaps than any Ally. She was responsible for her own food supply, and was also assisting other nations. The benefits of national trading could now be seen. It was probable that we would never be reduced to a shortage or confusion like that which existed at the end of 1917. The Ministry's aim was to encourage home production and control ,wholesale distribution. Milk had become a national necessity. The bread subsidy must be continued, and if existing discipline and self-sacrifice were maintained we would be able to feel absolutely safe from the menace of starvation.

The whole of the British fruit crop, he said, must be reserved for jam manufacturers. It was not likely that any surplus fresh fruit would be available for the public. The Government had purchased the whole 1917 bitter orange crop in Spain and Sicily for marmalade, two-fifths of the output of which would be required for the troops. The manufacture of margarine in Britain had increased fourfold compared with the output before the war. We were entirely independent of foreign imports. Our cold storage capacity had been increased from 32,000,000 cubic feet to 35,000,000, and an additional 5,500,000 cubic feet were nearly completed. By the end of the year the cold storage space would be increased 25 per cent. over that available before the war.

UNREST IN AUSTRIA.

MAY FOLLOW RUSSIA.

The Central News Agency states that people arriving in Switzerland from Vienna declare that an impression prevails in Vienna that Austria is likely to undergo Russia's experiences. A rebellious spirit is growing everywhere owing to political and economic reasons.

Innumerable attempts have been recently made against military works, especially in Dalmatia and Croatia. Hungarian patrols in Bosnia have been massacred and railways torn up. The present immobility of the Austrian army is due to internal insecurity. Poor harvest prospects also aggravate the situation.

THEY DIED FIGHTING.

Colonel Cripps, commanding the Buckinghamshire Hussars in Palestine, in a letter to Lord Burnham, who is honorary colonel of the regiment, contradicts the suggestion made by a witness at the Billing trial that Major Rothschild and Captain Neil Primrose were shot because they possessed knowledge of the alleged German black book. He says that both officers fell under Turkish fire while leading their men with great gallantry.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

Mr. Bonar Law, answering questions in the House of Commons, said that considerable misunderstanding had arisen in regard to the land grant proposals for Irish soldiers. He would make a considered announcement next week. It was intended to give similar grants of land to English soldiers.

SUBMARINES.

OPERATIONS OFF AMERICAN COAST.

NEW YORK, June 6.

Altogether 14 ships have been sunk off the American coast, totalling 20,000 tons. A new feature is the sinking of a neutral vessel, the Norwegian steamer Eidsvold (not Gibbs), of 1570 tons. The Eidsvold was sunk off Virginia Capes on Tuesday evening.

The captain of the French steamer Radioleine reports that 10 mines were picked up off Cape Delaware. It is believed that U151 and U37 are heading southwards.

The Norwegian vessel Viniland (1143 tons) was torpedoed and sunk on Friday off Virginia Capes. Nineteen survivors have landed.

Survivors from the steamer Carolina report that the captain of the U-boat boasted that he sank seven vessels, on Sunday, and four on Monday. He prepared to place 40 men aboard the Carolina, and to convert her into a raider, but feared capture owing to "S.O.S." signals. The U-boat had 6-inch guns.

The total missing from the Carolina is 25. There is no trace of the crew of the schooner Desauss, which was found in a derelict state.

ADRIFT IN ATLANTIC.

A German submarine shelled the Glasgow steamer Ellason, in the Atlantic. The Ellason fought until all her ammunition had been used. The crew then took to the boats. The submarine sank the ship and deprived one lifeboat of water, sails and all the oars, except two. The crew managed to reach Las Palmas after nine days' suffering. The other lifeboat was not molested and was picked up by a steamer.

MENACE GROWS LESS.

MORE SHIPS BUILT THAN SUNK.

A report from Paris says that the French Marine Department announces that the tonnage destroyed by enemy action in the first five months of 1918 was half that destroyed during the corresponding months of 1917.

England and America in April and May alone constructed more shipping than the Germans destroyed.

During April and May the Allies destroyed double the number of submarines which the Germans constructed.

DESTROYING THE U-BOATS.

A message from Washington states that Senator Swanson, acting Chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, declares that the Allies have destroyed 60 per cent. of all German submarines built, and reduced by one-half the shipping losses.

KONINGIN REGENTES.

WAS VESSEL TORPEDOED?

An Amsterdam message states that the Koningin Regentes sank 15 miles from Leman Bank. Sir George Cave and other members of the British delegation to the Hague are safe. Four stokers are missing.

The hospital ship Sindoro, answering the distress wireless signals, carried out the work of rescue. No prisoners of war were aboard.

A later report says Sir George Cave and other delegates sailed by the Sindoro, and not the Koningin Regentes. The conference was to begin on Saturday, M. Van Vrendenburg (Dutch Minister at Stockholm) presiding.

A Rotterdam message says the German spy system is so elaborate that it was freely stated before the hospital ships sailed that the British Delegation was coming aboard the Koningin Regentes. The arrangements were changed at the last moment. The Sindoro was within 500 yards when the Koningin Regentes was sunk. The ship's carpenter declares he saw a torpedo coming. The purser died from injuries.

CHAOTIC RUSSIA.

FOOD POSITION DESPERATE.

News from Russia shows that the position continues to be characterised by the utmost uncertainty and disorder. Petrograd correspondents are silent. Nothing is known regarding the food and economic situation there, or regarding the movements of Finnish troops, who are reported to be moving towards the capital.

A Copenhagen message says "Vorwaerts" publishes a proclamation by the Russian Government admitting that the food situation is desperate, and accusing the counter-revolutionaries of disorganising the distribution. The Government threatens to imprison people retaining grain, and is also arranging searches throughout the country for concealed stocks of food.

German newspapers announce as imminent a rupture in the negotiations between Russia and the Ukraine, agreement upon the frontier question being impossible.

Hundreds of Russian officers are reduced to starvation. Some are selling newspapers and matches in the streets of Paris.

German papers state that General Brusiloff, who was recently wounded in the leg in Moscow while fighting the Bolsheviks, is living on charity in great poverty. His leg was amputated.

Reports from Tiflis state that the Turks massacred over 10,000 Armenians during the last fortnight.

A Moscow message states that Germany has informed the naval authorities that the Black Sea port of Constanza is now open, and offers coal and agricultural implements in exchange for cereals, oil, and provisions.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

The Press Bureau states that it is expected that meetings of the Imperial War Cabinet and the Imperial Conference will begin in the next few days. The majority of the representatives already have arrived.

IRELAND AND CONSCRIPTION.

The Anti-Conscription Conference at Dublin has issued a statement warning their countrymen against false confidence in the belief that conscription has ended. Conscription has been only provisionally postponed.

"FIGHTING LIKE TIGERS."

AMERICANS IN ACTION.

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

The following official message from Washington is made available by the American Consul:—American marines in the first big land drive oversea scored a remarkable success in two new attacks on the main battle front near Chateau Thierry, on the Marne, where the infantry previously killed 1000 Germans. The marines, attacking the German centre, drove the enemy about two miles on a front of two and a half miles. They stormed through the German defences to the field gun positions. They penetrated among the gunners at two points, and prevented them serving their pieces, inflicting bloody losses. Whistling and singing, but fighting like tigers, they took more than 100 prisoners, while the French on the flank also advanced, taking 170 more.

The first American attack was a surprise attack at dawn, without artillery preparation. The second attack in the afternoon took Torcy and Torcy Wood. An entire German battalion was decimated. The Germans surrendered right and left when rushed.

Following other American successes these fights caused enthusiasm among the French, whose newspapers are filled with stories of American coolness, valour, and judgment. Three German divisions have been withdrawn because of losses sustained in fighting the Americans. German prisoners this week are starving, as they have been without food for four days owing to the Allies' barrage.

THE AUSTRALIANS.

SUCCESSFUL EXPLOIT.

(OFFICIAL COMMONWEALTH CORRESPONDENT.)

A message dated June 5 states:—For some time the Australians opposite the German positions at Merris have constantly harried the enemy by raids day and night, killing or capturing the occupants of German posts, who must have constantly lived in terror of what the Australians might do to them next. It is no exaggeration to say that our men have asserted such superiority over the enemy that they have felt they could go over when they pleased. A climax to these minor operations was reached early yesterday morning when some Western Australian troops made a surprise attack at 1 o'clock. They took two lines of German trenches besides several fortified farms on a front of three-quarters of a mile. The ground gained is extremely valuable, being a slight rise which formerly denied us observation of the defences in front of Merris. The country is mainly hop fields and wheat fields, which these same Australians watched being sown earlier this year while in rest billets. The houses around which they fought in the dark yesterday morning are the same farmhouses where they knew the inhabitants well and enjoyed their last rest before the beginning of the German offensive. Apart from the incentive of these reminiscences the Australians who made the attack had long been eager for a closer fight with the enemy, who is conscious of their growing superiority.

They opened the attack with a two-minutes' whirlwind of trench mortar, rifle, and grenade fire on the German front line, while the artillery dropped a curtain of fire behind the same line. The instant the fire lifted the infantry went with the bayonet and bomb with the wildest enthusiasm. In the first line there was some fighting, but not much. The enemy was too utterly surprised to offer much resistance, besides our attack caught him in the middle of a regimental relief. Owing to this lucky chance there were many more machine-guns than usual in the front line system, mostly unmounted, for the outgoing people were about to take out theirs and the incomers were similarly bringing in theirs. One German officer at first escaped our men and then sought refuge in a dugout, from which he was hauled by an Australian. He said that all were completely surprised by the attack, which was at first supposed to be merely a raid.

The enemy fought better in the second line, especially near a sunken road and several small farms adjacent. In one of these farms he mounted a machine-gun, which was captured intact. In this farm, which was apparently advertised as the Hun headquarters, we also captured a considerable quantity of German mail matter, including parcels of butter and eggs. This was probably mostly collected from French country over which the enemy recently advanced. The Australians made a great feast with this after they had dug in their new position. The enemy machine-gun fire was not serious, chiefly owing to the splendid dash of the Australians, who did not give the Germans a chance to use their weapons in most cases. Once when a machine-gun attempted to open fire on the attackers an Australian machine-gun crew, who were specially posted to check enemy action on the flanks, rushed forward with the gun within 50 yards of the German gun and engaged in a straight-out duel with it. They knocked out several gunners by direct fire, then rushed and captured the remainder, also the gun.

Both the Western Australians, who made the advance, and the South Australians, who advanced slightly on each flank rounding off the position, were in the highest spirits over their brilliant success, which was gained with trifling losses to ourselves and resulted in killing 150 Germans, also the capture of valuable ground and over 250 prisoners, about 34 machine-guns, 20 minenwerfer, and one field gun. Some Germans were exceedingly youthful. Several of them, as an Australian colonel said, could be knocked down with a stick. The iron helmets hid their little heads almost to their chins. Many other Germans, on the contrary, were big men, and fought well. One of them spoke English well. He said that large numbers besides himself had been specially instructed in English ready for when they were to invade England.

GERMAN RAID FAILS.

A message dated June 7 states:—Early yesterday morning the Germans attempted a large raid on the Australian lines on the top of Morlancourt Ridge. About 2.45 a.m. they crept up some small gullies leading up the hillside from the village, and lay outside our wire in thick crops. The Australian garrison noticed the movement, but thought the enemy were their own patrols. Suddenly a terrific German minenwerfer barrage was opened on the front line post contemporaneously with a heavy artillery bombardment of the rear lines. The Australians in the locality shelled moved their flanks in order to avoid casualties, and some of the enemy second wave entering between the posts reached the front line, but found it empty. The Australians' flank opened such a galling fire that they were unable to advance farther forward on the flank, and the enemy suffered heavy losses in their retirement. The enemy did not enter any of our posts, as the garrisons defeated all attempts at occupation.

They tried to drag off a wounded Australian officer from the edge of one post, but the garrison, seeing this, attacked and killed the whole party. The Germans did not effect any purpose, and took no prisoners. On the contrary, they left 21 of their men prisoners in our hands, also three machine-guns, and about 30 or 40 dead. A prisoner said the enterprise was very unpopular among the attacking force, which consisted of 23 men from each company in the regiment, being altogether about 270. This second heavy minor attack by the Germans in this vicinity was completely defeated with the most sanguinary losses among the Huns.

ARTILLERY HEROES.

Telegraphing on June 6 the correspondent says:—Probably few Australian fighting units have received so many general inspections in such a short time as were recently paid in compliment to a certain Australian mobile artillery brigade. This brigade possesses a fighting record of which any regiment might be proud. They played a great part in helping to hold up the German advance north of Bethune. Their efficiency, discipline, and smartness at work or on parade make them as a British artillery general recently said, equal to any gunners he had ever seen. They are the pride of the Australian colonel commanding them, and who has trained and led them.

At the time when the German assault broke through the Portuguese south of Armentieres, this brigade was in action a considerable distance away beyond the scene of the German attack. They were ordered at midday instantly to go out of action and march to the support of the famous 51st Division north of Bethune. They arrived at the end of the second day of the battle to find a gallant Scottish division extended over a very long front, whose men are described as footsore with walking from flank to flank and keeping in touch with one another. How they kept the Germans at bay the Australians say is a miracle. On one occasion a party of 15 Scots, steadily fighting a rearguard action against several hundred Germans not more than a few hundred yards away, realised from the nature of the firing that the enemy was growing short of ammunition. The 15 thereupon turned and chased back all these Germans fully half a mile.

When the Australian gunners arrived on the scene, the position they meant to take up already was in the hands of the Germans. They were ordered a little farther north. They clattered through the streets of a village under enemy fire, and going at a steady trot up the road to the north in perfect order, they dropped their trails and settled into action. Some of their officers took command of British infantry, whose officers were all casualties. One Australian gunner officer temporarily commanded a battalion of the Black Watch.

The Brigade Headquarters of the most forward of the batteries escaped capture by a hair-breadth early on the morning of the fourth day. The colonel's horse-holder outside headquarters fastened two horses by the reins to a fence, and was seen firing his rifle through the hedge at the Germans 300 yards distant. He then put down the rifle, saying, "If the colonel is staying I had better be captured holding the horses than firing." The colonel and others finally rode off from the yard as the Germans entered on the other side. Meanwhile back at the batteries the gunners kept up firing with magnificent coolness. When the infantry in front of them retreated they simply fought to a finish, the only men captured being wounded. Some gunners were sent out with rifles, and joining seven men of the Warwickshires, formed a little infantry line of their own immediately in front of the batteries while the guns were limbered up. The artillery drivers a few hundred yards back brought up their teams in splendid order under machine-gun fire. The time from the starting of the teams to moving away with the guns was six minutes. There was a critical little moment at their going out. It was necessary in order to remove the guns from their position to advance 150 yards towards the enemy. Swamps lay behind the position, and the road out lay in front. The batteries made for the road at gallop under rifle and Lewis gun protection. The few gunners with the seven British infantrymen then escaped down the road, the rearguard following. The fire on the road was severe, and a few horses were lost from the teams as they galloped out, but every gun was saved, and again came into action farther in the rear. The corps artillery commander, in thanking the Australian brigade for its splendid success, wrote, "I do not say this because you are Australians, but because you are one of the finest brigades I ever had the honour to command."

ITALIAN FRONT.

LOCAL SUCCESSES.

LONDON, June 7.

An Italian official message states: We entered trenches fronting Mont di Valbella, and took 50 prisoners; also six machine guns.

The French, by a surprise attack, captured 21 prisoners on the Sisemol front. We set on fire shelters and blew up a large ammunition dump in the Tonale region.

Our aeroplanes dropped five tons of explosives on military objectives.

OFFENSIVE EXPECTED.

The correspondent of the Australian Press Association learns that the Allies must expect an early Austrian offensive. The Piave now offers no obstacle, while operations in the mountains are also possible. The efficiency of the Italian army has enormously increased during the winter and spring. No Germans are operating on the Italian front.

JAPAN LOYAL.

PROSECUTING THE WAR.

The correspondent of the United Press at Tokio, denying a rumour that Japan is seeking a post-bellum pact with Germany, states that prominent Japanese carried the following resolution:—"Japan will adhere to the sensible Anglo-Japanese alliance, and continue to prosecute the war against Germany."

GERMANS EXPELLED FROM CHINA.

A message from Tokio says the chief reason why Japan asked China to expel all Germans from the country is that German consuls and others were indulging in propaganda against the Allies. The recent Japano-Chinese Treaty is forcing the Chinese to deal with the matter.

HEROIC SELF-SACRIFICE.

The Albert Gold Medal has been awarded to Lieutenant Thorner. He was examining hand grenades in a dugout in France, when one began to fizz. Realising that there was no method of disposing of the bomb, Thorner shouted to 12 men to clear out of the dugout. He himself held the bomb against his body till it exploded. Thorner was killed instantly, but the rest escaped, two only being slightly wounded.

BELGIANS STARVED TO DEATH

According to Amsterdam advices, the "Echo Belge" says a Belgian who escaped from Malines states that 10 Belgians were slowly starved to death because they refused to work for the Germans.

AMERICAN CELEBRATIONS.

There is much satisfaction in American circles over King George's promise to participate in the American celebrations in London on July 4. His Majesty will attend a baseball match in Chelsea.

THE MADSEN GUN.

Lord Beresford, in the House of Lords, drew attention to the capabilities of the Madsen gun, the invention of a Dane, which was offered to the British Government, but refused, saying it was worth while even now to manufacture it.

Lord Crawford announced that the Army Council would investigate the gun's merits and the authorities in France would have an immediate opportunity for testing it.

The Labour Conference on June 26 will consider the executive's recommendation to terminate the political truce forthwith.

At a meeting of the Zinc Corporation Mr. F. A. Govett (chairman) said the output of lead in the near future was likely to decrease. The Government would be well advised to accumulate all the supplies possible from Australia.

A.L.P. CONFERENCE.

SECRET SESSIONS.

At last the debate in the conference of the New South Wales section of the Australian Labour party's war aims has concluded, and so far as any public announcement is concerned it is resultless. Beginning about noon on Monday last, it lasted through the afternoon and evening sessions of that day, and through the evening sessions on every succeeding day until Saturday, when it was taken up again in the afternoon, carried on through the greater part of that and the evening sitting, and then concluded with the announcement for public use that it would be continued in the Perth conference, which opens next Monday. During the debates every phase of the subject that could be thought of was discussed, and the delegates from this State to Perth have therefore a fair idea of the feelings of their members, but for any inkling of the conclusions arrived at in Sydney there was absolutely not one word. Members who were inside were forbidden to talk outside.

A ballot was taken for the election of the State executive, and the following were chosen:—Messrs. P. Adler, J. Andrews, T. Arthur, G. C. Bodkin, R. W. Bramston, J. Cullinan, H. Denford, J. Farrell, J. S. Garden, J. Guest, C. Hogan, W. Hutchinson, J. Kearney, C. Last, J. Lynch, G. M'Carthy, C. Murphy, W. P. O'Connor, R. T. D. O'Halloran, L. J. O'Hara, W. Peat, J. Power, E. Riley, S. A. Ross, A. Rutherford, G. Sutherland, T. J. Swiney, and C. B. Trefle, Mrs. Bailey and Miss Matthews.

LATE WAR NEWS.

WESTERN FRONT.

MINOR OPERATIONS.

LONDON, June 8.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting on Saturday night, stated: We raided trenches southward of Arras, inflicting casualties. The French carried out a successful minor enterprise eastward of Dickebusch Lake, taking 47 prisoners.

In his aviation report Sir Douglas Haig states: Bombing was active on both sides on June 7. We dropped 23 tons of bombs on railway junctions, aerodromes, and dumps beyond German lines. We brought down 12 machines, and drove down seven uncontrollable. Three British machines are missing. Flying was impossible on the night of 7th inst.

GERMAN CLAIMS.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

A German official report states: Renewed enemy attacks north-west of Chateau Thierry and on the Ardre only brought him unimportant gains of territory.

THE AMERICANS.

The correspondent of the United Press on the American front, says the result of America's attacks on the Marne was the stoppage of the German rush. The Americans defeated three divisions of Prussian and Bavarian Landwehr on three successive days. The Americans pushed forward four miles, which was two miles further than ordered. They fell back under orders. They still hold two and a half miles, also an important strategic position.

A correspondent on the American front says the Americans advanced two miles on a two mile front in the Chateau-Thierry sector, and took 100 Germans prisoner.

WILL WIN THROUGH.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S SPEECH.

Mr. Lloyd George, responding to the toast of "Success to the Allied Arms" at the Printers' Pension Association's dinner, said he had just returned from France, where he had seen the Americans. One of the most encouraging things was the superb valour and skill of the Americans, who were coming in steadily. We were depending upon them. If the Allies failed it would be a sorry world to live in. The destinies of coming generations would be fashioned by the failure or triumph of our cause. There was contempt for humanity in Germany's struggle for military domination. We were passing through anxious days, and the crisis had not ended. We seemed to be watching at the bedside of a person suffering from a fell disease. The only thing to do was to hold on until the crisis was passed.

With stout hearts we would win through. Ludendorff's hammer blows might crush poor metal, but they only consolidated good metal. Unity and resolution were what we needed; then God would stem the torrent. (Loud cheers.)

CHINA AND JAPAN.

A Tokio message says Major-General Ugaki, who negotiated the agreement between China and Japan, states that it is not limited to defence, and its scope is not confined to the Orient.

Peking messages point out that the publication of the Notes exchanged between China and Japan throws no light on the rumours regarding the Japanese control of the training and organisation of the Chinese army. There is a fear that Japanese control will be general in China.

MR. W. M. HUGHES.

The newspapers are featuring the arrival of Mr. W. M. Hughes (Prime Minister of Australia), and the probable influence of his speeches on Imperial affairs.

KONINGIN REGENTES.

The captain and others on the Koningin Regentes are convinced that she was torpedoed. The carpenter, who was on deck, states that he saw an object approaching, and cried "Comrade, look at that great fish." An explosion followed. The quartermaster saw a torpedo 200 yards distant approaching in a slanting direction. He says he could not possibly make any mistake. Altogether five of the crew state they saw a torpedo approaching, and are positive that the boat was not mined. Mines are rare in that locality.

THE U-BOATS.

A wireless message from a patrol boat states that a tank steamer was sunk on Friday 100 miles off Cape Henlopen (at the south-west of the entrance to Delaware Bay). The authorities sent a wireless message ordering north-bound shipping to make for port.

Opinion in Washington is veering to the belief that the Germans intend to keep up the U-boat menace in American waters if possible by sending relays towards America. Wireless warnings of the expected attack were sent out before Saturday, and saved many ships.

GENERAL CABLES.

Lieutenant J. S. Denton and Lieutenant W. H. Denton, twins, and well-known Northamptonshire cricketers, are reported missing. The third brother was wounded in 1917, and had a leg amputated.

The Transport Workers' Conference has resolved to boycott the Germans for five years after the war.

The late Sir George Alexander bequeathed the rights of two of Oscar Wilde's plays to Vyvian Holland, who is Oscar Wilde's son.

There are extraordinary revelations in the Auditor-General's report regarding the national munition factories. There is a complete breakdown in the headquarter's record of materials despatched to and from the factories. The factories also failed to keep adequate records. Stocktaking revealed great shortages, which were written off. Production accounts show that 144 national factories produced £235,000,000 worth of war material. The Ministry frequently sent no invoices. In one case, out of £28,000,000 for materials supplied, £15,885,000 represented materials for which no invoices were received. In another case, after a firm of chartered accountants certified to the accounts, the factory accountant discovered an error amounting to £3,000,000 in respect of the value of materials supplied by the Ministry of Munitions. In the majority of cases reconciliation of the cost accounts with the financial books was impossible. The Government rolling mill was estimated to cost £630,000, but £1,200,000 was spent, a number of important items being omitted from the original estimate. The actual output had fallen far short of the estimated capacity of the factory.

The Gravesend by-election for the House of Commons resulted:—Richardson (Coalition), 1312; Davis (Independent), 1106; Hinkley (Labour), 552.

A New York message says that Jeremiah O'Leary and six others, who were arrested on a charge of espionage, have been charged with high treason.

Seventy-one vessels, including 32 wooden ships, were launched in the United States in May, the tonnage being 344,000.

A Washington message says Germany has threatened reprisals against Americans unless America releases Rintelen, the German spy, who is serving a sentence in the United States. Answering the threat, America states:—"Reprisal will inevitably invite similar action upon great numbers of German subjects in the United States."

Mr. Baker (Secretary for War) has asked for appropriations totalling £5,600,000 for the establishment of 20 coast aeroplane stations, including three at Hawaii.

Mr. McAdoo (Secretary to the United States Treasury) estimates the expenditure for the year ending June at £4,800,000,000, a third of which will be raised by direct taxation and the balance by loans. He urged higher taxes on war profits and luxuries.

WAR NOTES.

MINOR GAINS ON THE WEST FRONT.

The result of the military operations reported from the Western front during the week-end may be summed up as a series of minor Allied successes gained around the salient between the Aisne and Reims. These include the capture of four or five villages and the carrying out of several improvements in the Allied line. At no point, however, do the operations appear to have had anything more than local significance. North of the Aisne the French have retaken the village of Le Port, where one of the roads leading down towards Villers Cotterets from the north crosses the river, about three miles eastward of the more important crossing of Vic-sur-Aisne. The main weight of the Allied counter-attacks has, however, fallen along the sector between the Ourcq and the Marne, where a front of about 12 or 13 miles between Dammard and Chateau Thierry has been more or less affected by them. The Allies are evidently anxious to prevent the enemy from pressing further westward into the angle formed by these two rivers, where he would extend his grip on the northern bank of the Marne and bring increased pressure to bear on the important Villers Cotterets region from the southward. The British troops on the eastern side of the salient have effected a useful gain by their recapture of the village of Bligny, situated on the road between Reims and the Marne where it crosses the valley of the Ardre. The enemy is able to show little or nothing as a set-off to these Allied gains, but no optimistic conclusions will be drawn from this fact, as it is plain that he has still strong reserves to draw upon, and that his offensive efforts will be renewed before long.

DECLINE IN SUBMARINE ACTIVITY.

The announcement made by the French Marine Department regarding the submarine campaign is encouraging, and suggests that the curves of tonnage losses, shipping construction, and of the destruction of hostile submarines are all most favourable from the Allies' point of view. The comparison between the tonnage losses during the first five months of last year and those during the same period in the present year is promising, but it must not be forgotten that the first half of 1917 included the worst months of the enemy's unrestricted campaign. In April, 1917, when the curve of losses reached its highest point, the enemy submarines accounted for 893,877 tons of British, Allied, and neutral shipping. In the same month of the present year the total loss amounted to only 305,102 tons. A comparison of these two months showed that during April of this year the losses were only slightly more than a third of those sustained during the same month of the previous year. We pointed out at the time that this comparison was misleading, as April, 1917, was an abnormal month. The fact that during the longer period mentioned this morning a comparison shows that the losses sustained this year were only half of those suffered last year is encouraging, but we have still to remember that the unrestricted submarine campaign commenced in February, 1917, and reached its stage of greatest activity in April of the same year. The statement that England and America constructed more shipping during April and May than the enemy destroyed is also very satisfactory, and, if this achievement can be maintained or improved, the danger to the Allies' sea communications must steadily decrease. Perhaps the most welcome part of the announcement, however, is the reference to the number of enemy submarines destroyed, which is said to be double the number constructed during the period in question. This supports, to some extent, the statement in another message from Washington to the effect that the Allies have destroyed 60 per cent. of all the German submarines built.

DIFFICULTIES OF U-BOATS.

Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, informed us early in November last that, since the beginning of the war, between 40 and 50 per cent. of enemy submarines operating in the North Sea, Atlantic, and Arctic Oceans had been sunk. If this has since been increased to 60 per cent. it is clear that the anti-submarine measures are having the desired effect. The lot of the German submarine commander and crew is by no means an enviable one, as these figures clearly show. Mr. H. Whitaker, who gained some valuable information during a cruise with the American destroyer flotilla in the submarine zone, gave some idea of the difficulties of the under-water craft in an article published in "Land and Water" recently. Referring to the limitation in submarine operation he says:—"It cannot emerge and dive, as is generally believed, with porpoise ease. If they go down at an angle of more than 12 degrees, the older types capsize their ballast tanks and become helpless hulks. Abrupt dives, too, are very dangerous. . . . Neither can a U-boat cruise indefinitely under water. Seventy miles is about the limit—at any speed. After that, it must recharge its batteries while steaming on the surface, and if it be caught with exhausted batteries its situation is more than precarious. . . . Surface cruising has also its limits, being dependent on fuel. On the average a U-boat can stay out about 20 or 25 days; but a considerable part of this time is used up coming from and going back to the base. . . . Rough weather also brings a pause in the hunting, for the periscope describes a far wider arc than the hull, which threshes around like a wounded whale in a seaway, making both observation and the sighting of shots impossible. . . . Summing the U-boat's capacities and potentialities, we see that instead of being the original sea-devil, it is really a hunted creature."

THE PEACE OFFENSIVE.

Recent advices received from Germany by way of neutral countries indicate an attempt on the part of the German Press to renew the peace offensive. This in itself will not cause surprise as it has become almost a regular thing for the enemy officially to revive this cry during the period of comparative inactivity which necessarily follows upon each of his military offensive efforts. The fact that Lord Lansdowne is being urged to repeat his effort to bring about peace, which is announced in one of the cabled messages published this morning, is unpleasant proof that Germany's attempt to weaken the Allies' unity while she is preparing the way for further conquests is by no means a futile one. It seems almost impossible, in view of the experiences of Russia and Roumania and our knowledge of Germany's actions during the past four years, that the Central Powers can still dupe people in England into believing that "the time is opportune for an honourable settlement." The much-discussed resolution of the Reichstag regarding peace without annexations or indemnities was passed in order to mislead the Russians into the same belief, and when it had had the desired effect, and Russia emerged from her peace negotiations minus 1,400,000 square kilometres of territory, the Reichstag resolution and all references to peace without annexations or indemnities were dropped. As far as the peace discussions in the German papers are concerned, it has long been evident that the military authorities can, and do, start these whenever it suits their purpose. The official document issued early last year, and instructing all German papers as to the views which they were to express regarding the decision to enter upon the unrestricted submarine campaign, showed that the German Press reflects only the view of the German military authorities on questions which are expected to influence the minds of neutrals and of civilians in enemy countries. Those who entertain delusions at the present time regarding the possibility of an honourable peace would, if they could have their way, soon find, as the Russians did, that Germany will not agree to any peace which does not take cognisance of her "glorious military victories."

COMMODITIES AND FOODSTUFFS.

MELBOURNE, Saturday.

Orders were published in the Commonwealth Gazette to-day declaring paper bags, paper boards, strawboards, manufactured wool, horseshoes, broom millet, and linseed oil to be necessary commodities; "kiepalo" and honey to be foodstuffs, and aluminium to be a commodity.

UPPER HUNTER.

MR. CAMERON ELECTED.

NARROW MAJORITY.

Although one small return, comprising less than 50 votes altogether, has still to be received, the issue is beyond doubt in the Upper Hunter by-election, polling for which took place on Saturday last. The total figures, exclusive of this one return, are:—

Cameron (Nationalist)	3990
Toombs (Labour)	3715
Majority for Cameron	275

At the general election in March, 1917, Mr. Abbott (Nationalist) polled 3811 votes to his Labour opponent's (Mr. R. P. Kennedy) 3034, winning by a majority of 777.

At the last conscription referendum poll the voting in the electorate was: Yes 2979, No 4747, showing a majority for "No" of 1768.

The only return which is still to come is that from Idaville, where at the general election the voting was almost even, Mr. Abbott polling 22 and Mr. Kennedy 20. An examination of the details of Saturday's voting shows that out of 47 polling places Mr. Cameron the Nationalist candidate, secured a majority at 30, while 17 centres gave Mr. Toombs, the Labour nominee, a majority. There are five large towns in the electorate, namely Muswellbrook, Scone, Merriwa, Quirindi, and Murrurundi. At Scone the Nationalist won by 49 votes, and at Murrurundi he won by 72 votes. At Muswellbrook the Labour nominee won by 26 votes, while Quirindi gave him a majority of 61, and Merriwa a majority of 39. At Aberdeen, the next largest centre (there are large meat works there), the voting was very close, Mr. Toombs polling 223 and Mr. Cameron 218. The voting was heavier than at either the general election or the last conscription referendum. This is undoubtedly due to the extraordinary keenness of the organisation of both parties throughout the electorate. At the only absent voters' booth, at the Sydney Town Hall, 68 votes were polled, of which Mr. Cameron got 62 and his Labour opponent 6. Contrary to expectations, very few of the recruits from the electorate in the "March to Freedom" army took the trouble to exercise their franchise.

The number of names on the roll is 12,184. Of these, 1978 are ineligible, leaving 10,206 electors. The total poll was 7705, or 75 per cent. At the last general election the total poll was only 60 per cent.

The details of the voting are as under:—

MR. HOLMAN'S ANALYSIS.

"It is not at all an unsatisfactory result," said the Premier (Mr. Holman) last night. "Compared with the figures of the last election, the majority shows a marked diminution, of course. This is probably due to the very different campaign put up on behalf of the Labour candidate to that which the seat underwent 15 months ago. It is worth pointing out that the change in the majority is actually due to the fact that the Labour candidate has polled a bigger vote. The Nationalist vote has not fallen at all, but, on the contrary, has increased by nearly 200.

"The calculations of the Opposition were not based in any way on this data, but upon the figures of the recent conscription referendum, when the anti-conscriptionists were shown to outnumber the conscriptionists within the boundaries of the Upper Hunter by nearly two to one," said Mr. Holman. "Our Labour friends calculated that this proportion would again manifest itself at this by-election. As a test of that theory the by-election is an overwhelming frustration of such hopes. Whether we have advanced or receded on the last State election figures is a comparatively minor matter. I don't deny we should have been better pleased to have advanced than to have receded, even though there are good reasons explaining it. But the essential thing is to establish, as this election does, once again that the voting on State issues has nothing to do with the position of opinion that existed about conscription. Mr. Storey and his followers raised the one issue, and elected to stand or fall by it. They have fallen by it, and disastrously, when the figures of Saturday are compared with those of the referendum. They chose their own ground for making this attempt, and the result proves that the attempt is destined to failure. We shall probably hear less of these efforts to drag Federal issues into State elections in the future."

MR. STOREY DISAPPOINTED.

"I am, of course, intensely disappointed," said Mr. John Storey, leader of the State Labour party, last night. "A week ago I was convinced we were going to win right out. However, when it is remembered that at the last general election in March, 1917, Mr. Abbott won by 777 votes, the fact that the majority has been reduced to something under 300 is, to my way of thinking, a distinct victory. I also feel quite satisfied that had the election taken place a week ago we would have surely won. During the last week literature charging us with all sorts of offences literally poured into the homes of the electors, in addition to which nearly the whole of the Ministry visited the electorate, together with about 30 members of the National party. These combined influences naturally had their effect.

"An examination of the figures," went on Mr. Storey, "will disclose the fact that we were beaten, as usual, at the small centres, where it is difficult and costly to reach the people. With regard to the absent soldiers' vote, that was, apparently, not recorded. I shall have something more to say later on. It seems strange, and causes one to think hard, in view of the fact that so many electors were struck off the rolls upon the objection of Sydney organisers who were sent into the electorate, presumably by the Government, to qualify for citizenship in order to have the right to object. However, I desire to add that I am indeed pleased at the way my colleagues conducted the election. Captain Toombs proved an excellent candidate, and I am indeed sorry that so clean, hard, and capable a fighter should have been beaten."

Asked for his opinion of the effect of the Labour Council's anti-recruiting resolutions on the election, Mr. Storey said he thought they had a very material effect. The Government lost no opportunity, of course, of sending that decision right through the electorate, he said, and it was, of course, elaborated and added to in any way that was thought most advantageous.

THE NEW MEMBER.

The new member for the Upper Hunter, who is a farmer and grazier, was born in the district he has been selected to represent. He is a native of Rouchel, where his people, who were amongst the earliest settlers, have lived for nearly 80 years. Still a young man, on the sunny side of 40, Mr. Cameron has led an active life, and has been much before the public. He was amongst the first to enlist for service in the South African War, and went through the greater part of that campaign. He was one of a party of Australians, including three of his Rouchel mates, amongst whom was his cousin, now Lieut.-Colonel Cameron, ambushed by the Boers on the Zand River. The majority, however, escaped. Mr. Cameron was, later, a member of the contingent that represented Australia at the Coronation of King Edward. He is a cricket and tennis enthusiast, and has figured prominently in "big" cricket of the northern district, and also accompanied the Rev. E. F. Waddy's team to Ceylon.

In public life he has for many years been prominent in connection with the Primary Producers' Union, and a member of the Shire Council for his district. He has always been a democrat, and holds advanced political views.

WELCOME HOME.

MORE RETURNED SOLDIERS.

FLAGS, MUSIC, CHEERS, AND CONFETTI.

The back-from-the-war soldiers who arrived in Sydney on Saturday morning came from Melbourne by three special trains. These invalids and furlough men had what is called a clean run through, with the result that they finished their journey well up to time. There were 440 New South Wales men, and 200 Queenslanders, all of whom had been under shell-fire in France.

But the plans of the Minister for Recruiting for the reception of the men were to some extent spoilt by the "holding up" of a northern train with about 300 "March to Freedom" men and recruits, who were to have formed a guard of honour under Captain Eades and Lieut. Colyer.

Instead of reaching the Central Railway before the specials from Melbourne, the "March to Freedom" men were late, and had to fall in as a sort of rearguard, after the returned soldiers had left in the Red Cross motor cars on the run through the city to the Anzac Buffet. The accidental interference with the Minister's arrangements necessitated the cutting out of the parade of troops in Martin-place. To be sure, the "March to Freedom" men had a march on their own account, with a band, through some of the principal streets to the Central Recruiting Depot. Later in the day they went by train to the camp at Liverpool; but they missed the enthusiastic demonstrations in the city. The radiant faces of the returned men showed that the warmth of the welcome touched them in the finest fibre of their natures.

AT THE RAILWAY STATION.

With Brigadier-General Lee at the Central Railway Station were Captain Soane, A.D.C., Colonel Eric Sinclair (Principal Medical Officer), Colonel Lorenzo, Mr. Orchard (Minister for Recruiting), Captain Roach, Captain Taylor, M.C. (Staff Officer for Invalids and Returned Soldiers), Mr. Ross Gore (chairman of the State Recruiting Committee), Lieut. Alsop (organising secretary State Recruiting Committee), and the chairmen and members of the executive of the Red Cross Society. The Botany Red Cross Voluntary Aid Detachment met the trains and distributed flowers and cigarettes. The Dulwich Hill V.A.D. served morning tea for the Queenslanders, who went on to Brisbane about half-past 10. Men of the Marrickville V.A.D. came with the trains from Albury, and accompanied the Queenslanders to Brisbane. The medical examinations on the trains between Melbourne and Sydney were carried out by Captain Lewis and two other members of the Randwick Military Hospital staff. There was not one cot case. Music was provided on the Central Railway Station by the Liverpool Headquarters Band.

Captain Taylor, who "handled" the 600 returned men in record time, said a little later that he took off his cap to Miss Claire Garvan, of the Red Cross Society, who astonished him by the rapidity with which the New South Wales men were "placed" and sent off in the motor cars. Many of the owners on the Red Cross voluntary service list drove their own cars, some of which were decorated.

"THE JOY RIDE."

The route of "the joy ride," as one returned soldier described it, was Eddy-avenue, George-street, Martin-place, Moore-street, Castlereagh-street, Hunter-street, and Macquarie-street, entering the Domain by the Governor Bourke Gates. It was noticed that, apart from the brilliant display in Martin-place and Moore-street, there were more flags along the route than on the last "welcome home" day, and that the cheering was in much larger volume. The good feeling of not a few feminine enthusiasts was expressed in showers of confetti. In George-street, Martin-place, and Moore-street girls pelted the boys in khaki with flowers. At the entrance to the Anzac Buffet the blue-eyed banditti, who had provided themselves with packets of confetti, seemed to enjoy the lavish and indiscriminate "sprinkling" as much as the soldiers in the motor cars.

THE "STRONG POSTS."

Passing along the route of the motor-car procession in his own car, the Minister for Recruiting must have been pleased to see that the "strong posts" were making "joyful noise" in the most enthusiastic manner. The first of the new "strong posts" was that of Balmain, outside the George-street entrance of the Queen Victoria Markets. Here Mrs. M'Kenzie, the Mayoress of Balmain, had the help of the local girls brigade. The girls, who wear khaki dresses, "held the fort" at the recruiting platform in Martin-place. Near them were girls from the telephone branch of the G.P.O. and representatives of the 53rd Battalion Comforts Fund. The "strong posts" in Moore-street included those furnished by the Commonwealth Bank, the New South Wales Savings Bank, the Glebe Patriotic Club, the employees of the Merchants and Traders' Association, and the Manly district under Mr. Easterbrook. Round the corner, in Castlereagh-street, nearly the whole of the staff of the Mutual Life and Citizens' Assurance Company seemed to have turned out. There was a piano on a decorated lorry, and a large choir of girls, under the direction of Mr. H. Roberts, sang in chorus "Australia Will Be There," and other patriotic songs. It was 5 minutes to 11 when the procession of cars, headed by the Liverpool Headquarters Band, turned into Martin-place from George-street. The cheering must have been heard a mile away. Then Moore-street set to work to go one better than Martin-place, and cheered until there wasn't a cheer left. The returned soldiers did not conceal their pleasure as they passed through the two lines of singing girls outside the offices of the Mutual Life and Citizens' Assurance Company.

THE ANZAC BUFFET.

Not to be outdone by the "strong posts," the Anzac Buffet was bright with flags, and it should go without saying that the cheering was not of the half-hearted kind when the returned men arrived. Superintendent Kelly had charge of the police outside the grounds. Inside Miss Evans was ready to serve morning tea to the soldiers and their relations and friends. The Mormon and the Bexley Voluntary Aid Detachments were on duty. Captain Taylor, Miss Garvan, and the chairman of the Red Cross Society were among the visitors. The Liverpool Headquarters Band played cheerful music while the returned men were being sorted out and taken possession of by their rightful owners. Those soldiers who had no place to go to were invited to Rose Hall, Darlinghurst, as guests of the Red Cross Society.

While very few of the men had brought military decorations with them from France, it was noticed that a large percentage had South African and other war ribbons. One man wore a silver badge which had been issued unofficially to the Australians who had "stood it out" more than once at Ypres.

REWARDS OF BRAVERY.

Private Leslie Roy won the Military Medal while in charge of the platoon Lewis gun on the Menin-road, Ypres, last September. It was during a successful Australian attack on the German position. Private Roy had emerged from the heavy fighting on the Somme unharmed, but at Menin-road he received shrapnel wounds in the head, arm and leg. Although he had his right eyebrow blown away his sight has been saved. He counts a large scar among his "souvenirs." Private Roy brought details of the death in action of Lieut. C. Edwards, of Chatswood, who received the Military Medal and the Servian decoration after shooting a Turkish scout during the evacuation of Gallipoli. The returned soldier says that Lieut. Edwards was awarded his commission just before his death, which was one of the tragic results of an aerial attack on the Australians while they were in action on Ypres Canal bank.

Private Peter Richard O'Connor, who returned to Sydney on Saturday, has been on active service for three years and one month. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. O'Connor, of Narrabri. He went to Gallipoli in 1915, and remained till the evacuation. In March, 1916, he arrived in France, and was wounded in the right hand in October, 1917. Single-handed he killed three Germans, and also secured nine prisoners. For this he was awarded the Military Medal. His brother, Leo O'Connor, is on active service in France. Private O'Connor, accompanied by his mother, returns to Narrabri by this evening's mail, and is to be accorded a public welcome on his arrival at his native town.

DESTRUCTIVE STORM.

ORANGE, Saturday.

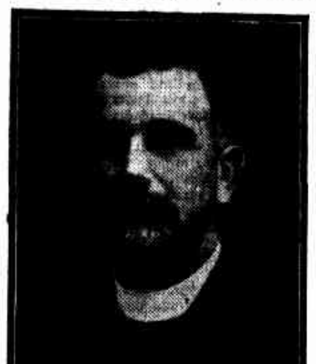

A terrific thunderstorm was experienced this morning, accompanied by a heavy fall of hail. Melyra, the residence of Mr. W. C. Bowman, was struck by lightning, and a fire broke out in two places from the flames fed by the gas escaping from the pipes; but they were got under before material damage was done. A large pine tree near the house was also shattered.

SOCIAL HYGIENE.

WELLINGTON, N.Z., Friday.

In response to the request for the appointment of women patrols in the principal cities, it is stated officially that the necessary regulations have been approved. It is intended to appoint a board for social hygiene work in conjunction with the district health officers.

THE LATE REV. J. STEELE.

THE LATE REV. J. STEELE,
whose death was announced in the "Herald" on Saturday, was a well-known Presbyterian minister.

GOVERNOR AT WAHROONGA.

The Governor and Lady Davidson, who were accompanied by Captain Stanham, A.D.C., paid their first official visit to Wahroonga on Saturday afternoon. There was a very large attendance. A contingent of cadets from Barker College, Hornsby, under Lieut. Finch, formed a guard of honour. At the entrance to the church grounds, Councillor Chapman, Acting-President, on behalf of Hornsby Shire Council, and Councillor Fitzsimon, President, on behalf of Kuring-gai Shire Council, extended official welcome, and Councillor Fitzsimon also presented his Excellency with an illuminated address and a volume of views of the district. Acknowledging these welcomes, his Excellency said that his intimate experience with local government in England and India made him feel that, coming amongst those interested in local government in this State, he was with fellow craftsmen. He was delighted with the district, with its salubrious climate and beautiful surroundings.

The ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of a soldiers' memorial hall in connection with St. Paul's Church, was presided over by the Rev. Stephen Taylor, rector of St. Paul's, with whom were associated Messrs. J. Haydon Cardew (secretary and treasurer of the building fund), R. B. Rainsford, J. Tayler, J. Barling, and Kershaw (church wardens). Mr. Rainsford extended a welcome, on behalf of the parish, to his Excellency and Lady Davidson.

Contrasting British and Central European methods of dealing with peoples over whom the Empire secured dominion and suzerainty, the Governor mentioned that before self-government was granted to the Boers their leaders were consulted regarding the forms that would be most likely to prove successful. There was no such thing as forcing on the people a form of Government that might be distasteful. The mere fact of consulting them softened the enmity of the Boers and removed also any suspicion that Britain regarded them as, or wanted them to consider themselves, a conquered people. The same principle was followed in the government of India. The fruits of these methods were being harvested in the loyalty of the people of those countries in the current crisis. Such liberties and privileges were, therefore, so well worth fighting for that the people were fully justified in commemorating the memories of the brave men who had gone forth to contend for them, and who had offered the greatest sacrifices men could offer. He congratulated the people of Wahroonga on the substantial and permanent nature of their memorial.

NEW MEMBER FOR UPPER HUNTER.

MR. W. CAMERON,
who was elected for the Upper Hunter seat on Saturday.

DEATH OF MRS. CHARLES ICELY.

The death took place yesterday morning, suddenly, of Mrs. Charles Icely, at the age of 79 years. Mrs. Icely and her two daughters were residing at The Astor, Macquarie-street. Yesterday morning the deceased was in the best of health, and proceeded as usual to have her bath. Shortly afterwards one of the daughters found her mother in a state of collapse in the bath. Medical assistance was called, but the doctor found that death, due to heart failure, had been instantaneous. The late Mrs. Icely was the fourth daughter of the late Mr. William Lawson, of Prospect, and granddaughter of the famous Australian explorer. She married Charles Icely, son of the late Mr. Thomas Icely, of Coombing Park, Carcoar. For a number of years Mr. Icely engaged in pastoral pursuits in Orange. Subsequently he and his family visited England, where they resided for several years. After the death of her husband in the old country Mrs. Icely and family returned to Sydney, where she has lived for many years enjoying the friendship of a large circle of acquaintances. The deceased lady leaves one son, Mr. Cecil Icely, and two daughters.

BOARD OF TRADE.

Mr. G. S. Beeby, Minister for Labour and Industry, states that the Board of Trade will probably hold its first meeting this week. Its first business will probably be the beginning of the inquiry into the cost of living, in order to establish the basic wage.

GERMAN INTERNEE ESCAPES.

A German prisoner of war escaped from the Holdsworthy concentration camp yesterday afternoon. His description is as follows.—About 5ft 6in high, brown hair, blue eyes, clean shaven, with a scar on the forehead. It is believed that he was well dressed when he escaped.

A CALL TO AMERICANS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Since my letter of June 1 I have received one from America, a few lines of which I send you. It should make all of us (American, British, Australian, or whatever we may be) sit up and take notice. It runs:—

"Dear Old Pal,—A few lines to you. How is the other end of the earth? Rotten here. Old Bill is too much in evidence. He sits in at least three times a week, with no meat one day, and no wheat another. The old dog steps in every shop with you, and digs the mailed fist in your pocket. Old sport, will we stand by and see this go on? Well, I don't think so. You and I have sat and watched the score board when it was against the home team, and all we could do was to 'root' and 'holler.' Now the score is dead against us in the big game, and dear old Uncle Sam has given us a late start. But if we all go in and wind up well, and shoot every one right over the home plate, down comes old Bill. I hope to meet you over there and once more root together for Old Glory and freedom. Pal Dick."

Surely we must all realise the gravity of the situation and get in. It is fine that my one little effort has borne fruit, as I have a letter from one pal who is meeting me in Sydney. I hope for a lot more. Let us look the situation square in the face, and all get in, help us clean up on Old Bill, and once more enjoy true freedom. No matter which flag we go under, but go. Let fellow-Americans write me, care of Australian Hotel, George-street West.

I am, etc.,
J. H. BRENNAN.
Catherine Hill Bay, June 8.

RECRUITING.

The Minister for Recruiting has expressed the wish that there will be a worthy citizens' demonstration to-day in honour of the soldiers who are going forward. The men of the reinforcements will leave the Central Railway Station with bands at 10.30, and will march through the city by the now well-known soldiers' route. There will be "strong posts" from Eddy-avenue to the road at the northern end of St. Mary's Cathedral. Arrangements have been made for bands to play in Martin-place and Moore-street. Auburn is to furnish one of the "strong posts" to-day.

To-night Mr. Orchard will leave for Melbourne. On Saturday last he arranged for a March of Freedom from Albury to Sydney.

The official recruiting figures on Friday were disappointing. To the total of 51 the country districts had supplied 42 and the Central Recruiting Depot 9.

On Saturday Lieut. Walter Marks, R.N.V.R., who is nearing the end of his leave, left for Brisbane. He has gone to Queensland to help in the recruiting revival. At Wallangarra the lieutenant will meet the Queensland March of Freedom.

To-day, at a quarter past 12, Mr. Peter Dawson will be heard in a musical programme, which is to precede the recruiting meeting in Martin-place. The representative Australian baritone is now a private in the Australian Imperial Forces. Mr. Dawson will have with him on the platform at 1 o'clock Mr. A. G. Ralston, K.C., Lieut. Mackenzie, Sergt. Browne, and Mr. Aucher, formerly of the French army.

To-day 120 men from Liverpool Camp will start from Granville on a five days' "March for Freedom," which will take in Riverstone and the Richmond and Windsor districts.

The march of soldiers on Friday last, with appeals at Hurstville, Carlton, Kogarah, and Rockdale, was under the direction of Warrant-officer Mulready. Of the ten men who volunteered, Rockdale supplied seven. The Mayors of Hurstville and Kogarah and Rockdale assisted. Mr. Bagnall, M.L.A., was one of the speakers at Rockdale, where the soldiers were entertained at supper by the ladies of the district. Sergeant-major Urquhart, Corporal Burns, Corporal Martin, Private Scrimshaw, Private Finnie, and Warrant-officer Mulready made a strong "speaking team" of returned soldiers.

LABOUR SPEECHES.

MR. STOREY ATTACKS MINISTERS.

AUSTRALIA AND NEUTRALITY.

The delegates to the conference of the New South Wales Australian Labour party were entertained at a public welcome in the lecture room at the Trades Hall last night.

The leader of the party in the Legislative Assembly, Mr. John Storey, referring to the defeat of the Labour candidate in the Upper Hunter by-election, declared that the Nationalist party took extraordinarily extensive measures of organisation to secure their success, and the expense must have run into thousands of pounds. The fact of the matter was that the Government of the day realised the fact that the people of the country were so educated up to the ideals of democracy that they were determined "that with Holman and his crowd it was only a matter of time." He (Mr. Storey) was convinced that the National party was very shortly going to do with Mr. Holman what on Friday last they decided to do with Mr. Fitzgerald. "Jack Fitzgerald," said Mr. Storey, "was a Labour member at one time; he was one of our classical champions, but Holman and he went over to the other side, and he even became Vice-President of the Executive Council. I said to him, 'Jack, if you keep on going as you are going it is sure to end in disaster,' but he merely replied that he was never so happy in his life before. Think of the ignominy! He goes over to the other side, and is the Vice-President of the Executive Council, and immediately they get the opportunity they put Garland in his place. I am not saying it does not serve him right—it does not serve him right enough. He is certainly still Minister for Public Health and for Local Government, but, think of his mortification sitting in the Legislative Council a dethroned king! To men of his type that is very unacceptable—it is to anyone, in fact, and I speak feelingly, because I was Premier of this country for five minutes, and my experience then was not the most encouraging, but I stood it for the maintenance of solidarity in the Labour movement. Mr. Fitzgerald's experience will ere long be the experience of greater than he."

Mr. William Martin, president of the Glebe branch of the party, said that the method of governing Australia that had been dictated for so many years from the other side of the world, which knew little or nothing about them, would never suit Australia. Of necessity Australia must strike out for itself if it was to hold its own at all. If the great statesmen on the other side of the world realised Australia's geographical position they would have said when the war broke out, "Stand neutral."

ARCHBISHOP KELLY.

SPEECH ON THE WAR.

CHURCH PRAYING FOR VICTORY.

Archbishop Kelly, in opening the new school of Mary Immaculate at Manly yesterday, in the presence of a large gathering, including the Mayor of Manly (Alderman Heaton), said they must not lose sight of the war and of their determination to win. (Applause.) He had been told that it was his duty, as one who occupied a prominent position in society, to lend all the aid he could in enkindling enthusiasm in the cause of small nations and in the cause of right against might, and if necessary in the defence of Australia. The war was not over yet. What would win it was enthusiasm. The people who could sustain that enthusiasm the longest would win. He had welcomed and entertained soldiers at Manly. He had given them all the encouragement and approval that he had in his heart for them. At the time of trouble in Liverpool he had stayed with them. His tower at Manly was their watch-tower before their own arrangements were completed. He asked the Press to be the kindly medium of correcting an impression made by some remarks of his at Lewisham, to the effect that, in connection with their church at Liverpool they had to provide light for themselves. He believed that that was still the case when he made those remarks, but he now learned that it was not so. The present working commandant at Liverpool had felt hurt by the remarks. He (Archbishop Kelly) had had to protest against the holding of military court martials in their camp during his visit there. It was not done now, however. Some people said "The 'sky pilots' should be made to go to the war, too." They were there. His Church had sent 40 or 50 priests as chaplains. There had been "dampers" and "dampers" put upon Catholic enthusiasm during the last few years. He asked them not to criticise the people in Ireland, whose enthusiasm was such that the first fights in which the Allies were engaged in Europe were carried on to the martial strains of "Tipperary." (Applause.) God grant that they would win the war. Three times at mass that day every priest in the diocese had prayed for success in the war.

DESERTION ABROAD.

It occasionally happens that men of the Australian Imperial Force desert their units from the firing line or after they have been warned for duty in the firing line in France. As this has the effect of throwing extra work and danger upon their loyal comrades, and is a most serious offence, the Department of Defence has adopted the policy of publishing the names of such men, with the punishment awarded upon their conviction. The following men have been tried by court-martial and found guilty of desertion under these circumstances, and have received heavy sentences accordingly:—

No. 2899, Private J. J. Foran, 49th Battalion, Australian Imperial Force. Tried on February 23, 1918, for desertion, and sentenced to 10 years' penal servitude, which was suspended.

No. 6026, Private L. Griffin, 14th Battalion, Australian Imperial Force. Tried on February 20 for desertion, and sentenced to 15 years' penal servitude, which was reduced to three years.

No. 2780, Private A. H. Lovering, 49th Battalion, Australian Imperial Force. Tried on February 23 for desertion, and sentenced to 10 years' penal servitude, which was reduced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour.

PARTY MEETINGS.

Meetings of both the National and Labour Parliamentary parties have been convened for to-morrow, in preparation for the reassembling of Parliament on Wednesday. It is expected that there will be opposition among a section of the National party to the Government's proposal to re-register a number of unions by special Act of Parliament. Ministers, generally, however, take the attitude that whilst the deliberate decisions of the Labour Council and the Labour Conference certainly forfeit their right to the fulfilment of the promises made at the Governor-General's Conference, there are other weighty reasons for re-registering the unions. It is contended that to keep a large number of unions divorced from the Arbitration Court is completely to prejudice the prospects of the new Arbitration Act realising the success generally hoped for it.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Entries for the Rosehill Prince of Wales Birthday meeting on the 22nd and 24th inst. must be lodged with the secretary, Mr. Geo. W. S. Rowe, before 4 p.m. to-day. The added money totals 1400 sovs., of which each of the sprint handicaps gets 125 sovs., the long distance handicaps 135 sovs. each, and the minor events 110 sovs. each.

New Guinea, who won the Nursery Handicap from the jump to the judge's box at Canterbury Park on Saturday, comes from the same family as the renowned Wakeful, for she is by imported Cooltrim (son of Flying Fox) from Lethargy, by Malster from Slumber, by Trenton from Nightmare.

Mr. Edwin Woodbury, secretary, invites, up to 4 p.m. to-day, nominations for the meeting of the Menangle Park Racing Club on the 19th inst. The prize money totals 350 sovs., of which 100 sovs. goes to the Menangle Park Handicap, and 50 sovs. each to the other events.

The New Zealand-bred horse Some Boy, by Cyrus (imp.) from The Tart (imp.), who won a number of sprint races at the unregistered meetings, and under A.J.C. rules, has developed into a stayer, and he carried top weight, 9st 5lb to victory in the Canterbury Handicap (1¼m and 100yds), on Saturday in fine style. He is owned and trained by H. S. Stockdale.

CANTERBURY PARK RACE CLUB.

The June Meeting of the Canterbury Park Race Club took place on Saturday afternoon, and attracted a large gathering of sporting folk. The weather was threatening, but only a few light showers fell during the afternoon, and did not affect the racing of the track, which was good going. The fields were large throughout, and the Park Stakes was run in three divisions. Backers were pretty well on the mark, favourites and well-backed horses winning in all but the last race. The totalisator, at 10/ tickets in the paddock and 5/ in the Leger, handled, in the aggregate, £9102 10/, of which £3498 10/ went through the paddock and £5604 through the Leger machine. A couple of falls occurred in the Hurdle Race, Manchu and Lone Pine coming down at the hurdle near the far corner in the first round of the track. H. Dorrington, who rode Manchu, had a collarbone dislocated; and Hollingsworth, who steered Lone Pine, sustained concussion of the brain. For interference with British Belle, Fortrait, and others in the first division of the Park Stakes, F. Sutherland, the rider of Ready Aye Ready, was suspended for six months; and for neglecting to scratch Millie Kenilworth for the Flying Handicap within the prescribed time her owner, Mr. J. Arthur, was fined £5. A protest on behalf of Alasco lodged against Some Boy, the winner of the Canterbury Handicap for interference, was dismissed.

The details of the racing are subjoined:—

HURDLE RACE, a handicap of of 100 sovs, second horse 20 sovs, and third horse 5 sovs from the prize, about 2m.
Mr. W. J. Rickett's b g Sweet Step, Cakewalk—Sadness, aged, 9st 7lb (J. Collitt) ... 1
Mr. A. Castle's b g W.L.S., aged, 10st 2lb (E. Moon) ... 2
Mr. G. R. Pickles' b g Master Hawthorne, aged, 9st 2lb, inc. 2 lb over (G. Noonan) ... 3

MEAT PRICES—A SUGGESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—For the last couple of weeks I have been trying to show that when a producer breeds, fattens, and sells a bullock of 700lb weight after five years' work in production he gets about £16 for him, including hide, tallow, and by-products. My method was to sell and have weighed 20 prime bullocks, and then employ a well-known solicitor in Sydney to buy, take delivery of, and pay for the meat in a first-class retail butcher's shop. This showed that someone between the saleyards and the city consumers got about £35 for killing, cutting up, and delivering a £16 bullock to the city consumers. As hide, tallow, and by-products are worth about £4, that leaves for the beef about £12. My critics have endeavoured to show that the added cost between the saleyards and the consumer is only about £25. As my figures only apply to first-quality beef sold in first-class retail shops my critics may be right as to second or third quality beef. Either set of figures will suit my purpose. Mr. Piddington, the Royal Commissioner, who has just reported to the Federal Government, shows that the cost of killing, cutting down, freezing, paying wharf rates, and delivering beef f.o.b. to the British Government is 0¾d per lb, or £1/1/10 for a 700lb bullock, and that is more than it cost me when I was selling to the London consumers through Aberdeen and Newcastle up to March, 1915. The combine, which is now levying a toll of from £25 to £35 from the city consumers on every 700lb bullock sold at Homebush is the same combine that with the help of preference to unionists and the black system in September last stuck up and tried to starve the City of Sydney, when producers had to go down in thousands to kill and distribute their stock to the citizens, and there are more in it than are suspected. Producers cannot do this every time the toll is increased, and consumers cannot help themselves. What I wish to suggest is that slaughtering and freezing works should be built in producing centres so that we producers could send our meat to the city retail shops at a cost of 0½d per lb, with rail freight added, or to the consumer direct, or for shipment at whatever the export price might be. Export prices would then regulate city prices automatically. This would be following on the lines of the country butter factories which are now being established all over Australia. There are no strikes and no ca canny in these butter factories, because the suppliers could take charge and run the factories for any length of time at a day's notice, and so could the country meat suppliers. Butter factories can work to a radius of 15 or 20 miles. Meat factories could work to a radius of 150 miles or any distance by railway. I am, etc.,

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

As depicted on the chart, the immense high pressure still occupies the greater part of Australia. Some alteration, however, has occurred in the central and south-eastern areas. In the former region a slight intensification is noted in the barometric values, whilst a loss in energy has resulted in Tasmania. Thus a narrow central stretch of "high" now lies between Alice Springs and Adelaide, and another rests over Tasmania and Bass Straits. This distribution, in conjunction with the tropical activity still present over central and northern areas of New South Wales, should cause a variety of weather conditions. Further scattered rain and thunderstorms are indicated, but chiefly over the eastern and southern districts; otherwise fine, with a frosty, foggy, night; southerly winds, squally in parts, on the coast. The presence of a "col," or area of relatively low pressure, in which thundery conditions usually occur between the high over New Zealand and on coast favours some local heavy falls on parts of the seaboard, possibly with thunder and hail. The Antarctic disturbance over Western Australia is of an [illegible] character, and since Friday having expanded eastwards over that State, is associated with [illegible] unsettled conditions generally. Some moderate to heavy falls have occurred in S.W. district, Perth [illegible] 200 points. As it advances farther eastward, N.W. to S.W. winds, strong to gales, should [illegible] Western Bight and extend towards Bass Straits.

BULK HANDLING.

It was stated last night by Mr. Grahame, Minister for Agriculture, that an officer of his department, Mr. Harris, had been sent to America to inquire into the administration of bulk handling. The mission will probably occupy six months.

Mr. Grahame, who has just returned from a sitting of the Australian Wheat Board in Melbourne, also referred to the Federal Government's guarantee of a first payment of 3/, out of a guarantee of 4/ per bushel, for the crop of the next two harvests. He said the State Government is committed to pay New South Wales wheat growers 4/ per bushel on delivery at country stations. This matter, he said, will be further considered by the State Cabinet this week. The Minister said the area under wheat this year would be quite equal to last year.

BANKING AMALGAMATION.

Should the proposed amalgamation of the National Bank of Australasia and the Colonial Bank of Australasia be effected, it will be the fourth event of its kind which has taken place in the last two years, the first being the Bank of North Queensland and the Royal Bank of Queensland, the amalgamation being known as the Bank of Queensland. Then we had the absorption of the City Bank of Sydney by the Australian Bank of Commerce, and following on that early this year was the amalgamation of the National Bank of Tasmania with the Commercial Bank of Australia. The combined assets of the banks whose amalgamation is now under consideration, the National Bank of Australasia and the Colonial Bank of Australasia, amount to £24,175,264. The factory mortgage has been reduced since the closing of the accounts by £500. The loss on realisation of plant of those establishments which were closed has been written off. LONDON MARKET CABLES.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

LONDON, June 6.

Butter is plentiful and large quantities are being stored.

The latest distribution of cheese consists largely of recently arrived Australian. The quality is generally satisfactory.

CEREALS.

Wheat is quiet. Further sales are noted of Australian passage parcels at 79/6. Little is offering on spot.

Flour is steady.

Oats and peas are firm. Beans are a shade easier.

SUGAR.

Sugar is unchanged.

SHORT FRUIT CROPS.

Experts predict that fruit crops in England this season are likely to be the smallest for 50 years. Traders are renewing their request to be allowed to import Canadian and American apples, and suggest that Australian growers should endeavour to get permission to ship next season.

MINING.

A quiet week-end market ruled for mining shares on the Stock Exchange on Saturday. In sympathy with Adelaide, Barriers tended to weaken, but B.H. Proprietary, which was /3 lower at 72/3, was the only stock to appear on the sale board. Tin shares engaged the bulk of attention, and Ratrut received most support, closing /3 higher at 24/6. Vegetable Creek, however, sagged /7 to 5/3; while Trong receded a shade also. Kampong and Carpathias appeared firmer.

Copper concerns claimed a few sales at steady rates, and gold ventures changed hands on a firm basis. The announcement of the facts of the Mammoth deal was reflected in an easier market. Paid shares closed 1/3 lower at 13/6, and the contributing issue eased 1/ to 5/.

AUSTRALIAN BUTTER MARKETS.

The advance in price of choicest quality butter in Sydney to 158/8 has not been sufficient to restrict sales, and the demand is still very strong. A considerable quantity of butter ex the winter storage scheme is now being marketed. This butter is opening up in satisfactory condition. The improvement is due to pasteurisation.

In Melbourne choice Victorian brands are very scarce. The deficiency is being filled with Queensland consignments, but buyers are not inclined to accept imported butter unless as a last resort. Arrivals for the week ended May 31 totalled 5289 boxes of butter and 32 tons of cream. Compared with last year this shows an improvement due to the fact that the northern districts have experienced good early rains. The price at which next season's surplus butter has been offered is 180/ per cwt. f.o.b. This information has now been made public, but no definite acceptance has been received.

Last week's production in Queensland is estimated by Prescott, Ltd., at 9400 boxes. Surplus stocks are under the control of the Federal Advisory Committee, through whom the interstate markets are being supplied.
